

Wilmington tilts to Hildt, but Mavroules tips the total

by Larz F. Neilson

Congressman Nick Mavroules' narrow victory in the Sixth District primary was not mirrored in Wilmington where challenger Barbara Hildt trounced the embattled Peabody Democrat. Hildt tripled Mavroules' vote 1295 to 434. Eric Elbot polled 248 votes.

District-wide, Mavroules claimed victory on less than a 1000 vote margin, with Hildt planning to ask for a recount.

Mavroules, under a 17-count federal indictment, was not without local support.

"He may be all the things they say he is," said Ralph Peterson, past chairman of the Democratic Town Committee. "But I voted for him because I didn't like the way they did it," referring to the handing down of the indictment two weeks before the primary. He charged that the timing of the indictment was political.

Wilmington's support of Hildt reflected other towns in this area. Many suburban towns went for the Amesbury state representative, but Mavroules strength in the city strongholds of Lynn, Salem and Peabody gave him enough votes to top, if only by a narrow margin, the smaller victories in the suburbs.

Mavroules will face off in the November election against Republican Peter Torkildsen of Danvers.

Torkildsen lost Wilmington to Alexander "Sandy" Tennant of Lynn, but carried the district by a substantial margin. Locally Tennant had 305 votes to Torkildsen's 246.

Wilmington's polls were fairly quiet, both during and after the voting. Only a dozen people were present at 10:45 when the results were read. Turnout was 24 percent, with a total vote of 2616. Of those, 2043 took Democratic ballots, and 571 Republican.

Sewer rates to jump 30 percent

by Arlene Surprenant

Wilmington sewer users will see a 30 percent increase in their October bills thanks, primarily, to an increase in the town's MWRA (Massachusetts Water Resource Authority) assessment. The sewer rate will immediately jump from $3.28 per hundred cubic feet to $4.27. According to Water and Sewer Supt. Paul Niman, this means the average family paying $393 annually will now be faced with a $512 annual bill.

At last Thursday's meeting of the Water and Sewer Commission, Niman reluctantly recommended the increase for three reasons: the MWRA rate increase, the decrease in sewer usage due to the shutdown of the Sweetheart Plastics plant, and the change in the collection schedule from four quarters to three quarters. The superintendent said he and town administrators "agonized" over the increase.

Both Niman and Town Accountant Michael Morris blamed the need for a rate hike primarily on the town's debt to the MWRA. Of the department's $1.9 million budget, $1.27 million goes to the MWRA. Morris told the commissioners if they don't go along with the proposed increase, the town will have to find revenue elsewhere or lay off town employees.

"The MWRA will get their money one way or another," he said.

Jonathan Goldfield said he was troubled that only about 600 families would be bearing the cost since the rest of the town wasn't on sewer. Neil Waisnor urged the men to "try to keep it (the rate) as low as we can." Chairman Noel Barratta said until the MWRA rates stabilize, Wilmington will be "behind the eight ball."

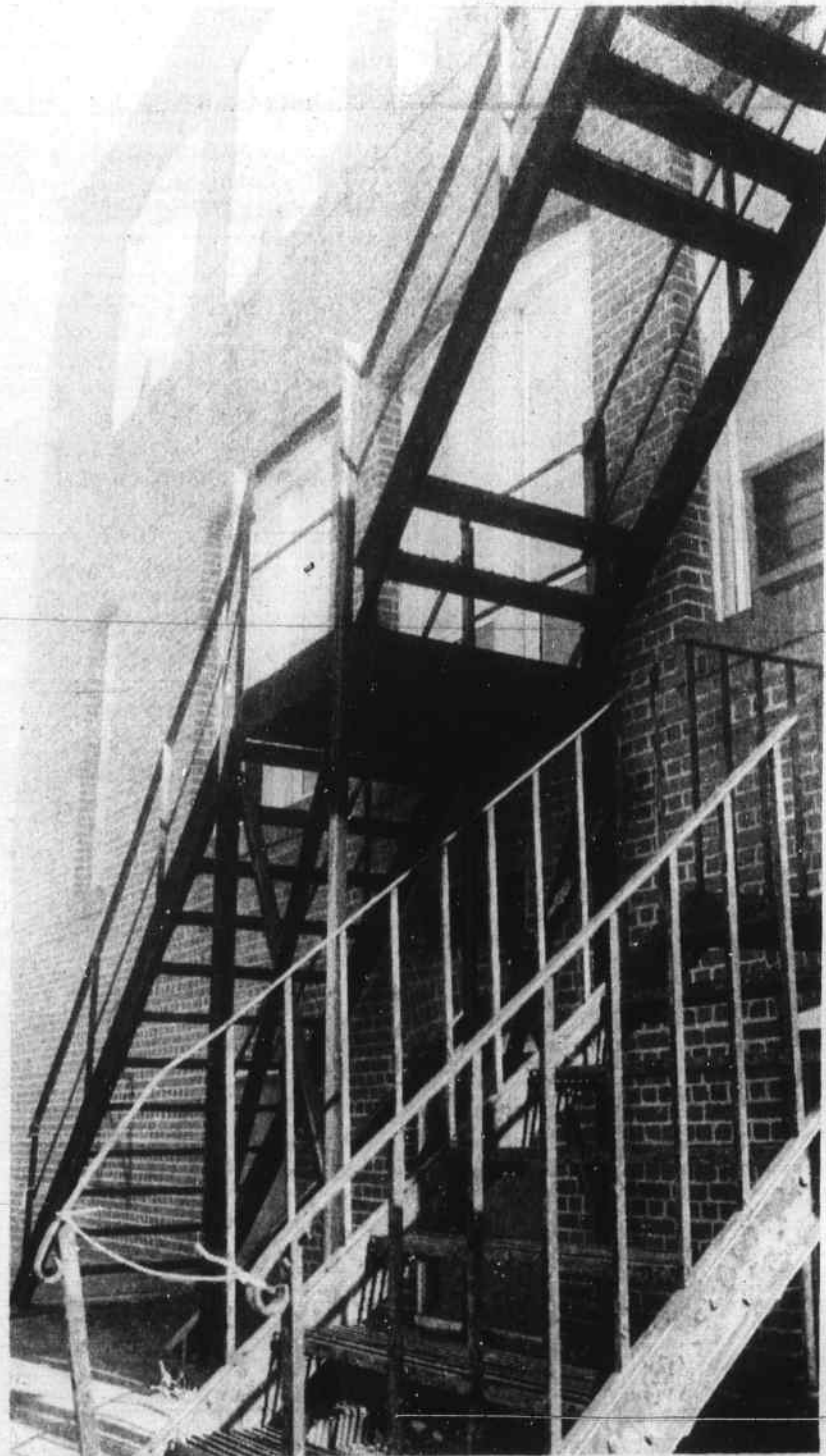

Niman explained he would be monitoring usage over the next nine months to be sure there would be no more increases this year. He added there was a possibility the rates could decrease, but none of the board was optimistic that would happen.

Commissioners accepted the recommended increase with the understanding there would be a quarterly review of the town's sewer usage. They also tabled any discussion of new water rates until their September 24 meeting. The board meets in room 4 in town hall at 6 p.m.

Escape to go

The fire escape at the Swain School has been taped off limits, and is scheduled for demolition on Friday. A Wilmington youth suffered unspecified injuries on Saturday when he fell through the fire escape, while climbing on it. Town Manager Michael Cairn said there was no need to retain the fire escape under the building code.

Selectmen allow dogs to stay, if restrained

by Arlene Surprenant

The owners of three dogs who have allegedly attacked other animals were ordered to restrain their dogs and keep them from getting loose or face the consequences. Wilmington selectmen said Monday that, under Massachusetts General Law, if the owners violate the restraining order, the dog officer has the right to put the animal in question to sleep.

The board of selectmen handed down their unanimous decision Monday following a public hearing in August on the controversial cases. The first case concerned two pit bull terriers owned by Richard Jackson and Paulette Kelleher of Salem Street. The second concerned a male mixed breed owned by John Eldredge and Kelly Welch of Hopkins Street. Testimony was presented to selectmen in August showing that the pit bull terriers had attacked other dogs and the Eldredge dog had been a participant in an attack on a miniature horse owned by neighbor Dorothy Fox.

Selectmen Chairman Mark Haldane said his board had three options: to do nothing, to order the dogs restrained or removed from town, or to have the dogs euthanized. Most selectmen felt it would be irresponsible to order the dogs removed in case an incident happened in another town. Chester Bruce questioned the town's liability. Haldane felt the town wouldn't be liable since the board was dealing with the charges and not ignoring the situation.

Haldane recommended, in the first case, that selectmen order the two dogs restrained and give Jackson and Kelleher the benefit of the doubt. Bruce agreed, but asked that the owners be warned that there would be no second chance in case of another attack. In the second case, Haldane said he was uncertain if the male had participated with his female counterpart in the actual attack on the horse. Fox told the board she witnessed the attack by both dogs and "one dog could not have done the damage to this little horse." The board of health had already ordered the female removed from town for being the aggressor in the incident.

Selectman Gerry Duggan called restraint an "extreme measure" saying there wasn't enough documentation on the horse incident.

"I don't think the dog fits into any of the categories that were written in that law," he said.

"The Foxes should feel safe on their own property," countered Haldane.

In the end, the board voted in favor of restraining the mixed breed as well. The owners now have the right to appeal the board's decision to District Court or to remove their animals from town.

Water mains in easements to get second look

by Arlene Surprenant

After looking at their second agenda item covering a water main through an easement in as many months, members of the Wilmington Water and Sewer Commission last week directed their superintendent to bring back a new policy covering the issue. They also voted to require the developer of Allgrove Estates II to loop the subdivision's water line and bring it in through a paper street at the end of North Street to connect to Marcia Road and Dadant Drive.

The subdivision plan is currently under review by the local planning board. Planners have asked for input from all concerned town boards. Water and Sewer Supt. Paul Niman told his board Thursday the developer wants to cap the water main at a cul de sac off the existing Allgrove Lane and put in a fire hydrant there for safety precautions. This, he said, would be a cheaper option than looping the water main and bringing it in through an easement to North Street. Niman explained his preference, and that of the local fire department, would be to loop the main so that homes could get water from two directions. The loop system, he added, would assure better water quality and a steady supply of water in case there was a break in the line.

The main problem with this solution is that the line would have to go through an easement. Under current water department policy, lines can only come in through accepted public streets. The policy, said commissioners, was formulated to prevent developers from bringing in lines through "the back door." With more development in town, however, the opportunity for looping the mains becomes greater, said the board.

Commissioners favored a loop system over the proposal to cap the line at the cul de sac. They stressed, however, they did not favor opening up North Street and extending that road in order to bring in the water main. They noted neither the planning board nor the neighbors wanted the road opened up.

Two neighbors concerned about the possibility of extending North Street were in attendance last Thursday.

"I wouldn't want to put any house in jeopardy. I don't want the street (but) they can put the line in," said Mario DiFilippo, an abutter living on Marcia Road.

Though Neil Waisnor frowned on setting a precedent, in the interest of public safety, he and the other commissioners voted to loop the line and let the planning board take whatever action it deemed necessary to accomplish that. They also agreed with Niman that mains in easements will keep coming up as an issue unless the board makes some changes to the old policy. They asked the superintendent to craft a new policy for review at a future meeting.

She's counting jelly beans now

Gertrude Condrety wasn't counting votes at the primary, having retired from the Wilmington Board of Registrars after 21 years service. But she does still have something to count.

Mrs. Condrety, in spite of her 84 years, has not gone into total retirement. The 1992 book of persons listed has her occupation as "jelly bean counter."

It seems to be a classic case of an entry made as a joke that was not caught before it was printed.

Also taking his leave of the Board of Registrars is Bob Cavanaugh, who gave 20 years of service. Mr. Cavanaugh, by the way, is the son-in-law of the late Mary Gilligan, who served as town clerk back in the 1950's.

Septage rates placed on hold

by Arlene Surprenant
Wilmington water and sewer commissioners last week postponed any decision to change the current septage rates until November. However, Supt. Paul Niman had some strong words for septage haulers who are reportedly lying to their customers.

Niman told commission members Thursday some haulers are telling their customers the board is raising septage rates and using that as an excuse to raise their own prices.

"It's not because of us," he said. Niman explained all his department is doing is tightening up past policy to try to identify where the septage is coming from and to see if some is coming into town from outside MWRA (Massachusetts Water resource Authority) districts. Because of the tightening effort, some haulers are "feeling the pinch," Niman said.

The superintendent feared that raising septage rates will make it easier to dispose of the septage loads out of town. Chairman Noel Baratta said he favored an increase because septage causes most of the problem in the town's sewer system, including pipe deterioration. Jonathan Goldfield said he favored a decrease in rates.

The board agreed to table further discussion until their November meeting.

In a related matter, the board discussed the possibility of Wilmington becoming a multi-town site to receive septage from other communities. According to an August 28 letter from Mary Robbins of the MWRA Toxic Reduction and Control Department, Wilmington not only generates the largest amount of residential septage compared to all other towns in the northern portion of the MWRA service area, but it also has "one of the best managed septage receiving sites." She went on to add these facts make Wilmington an "ideal candidate" for modification as a multi-town site.

Robbins said, according to preliminary estimates by Weston and Sampson Engineers Inc, it would cost $45,000 to upgrade the town's septage facility by town park to meet DEP requirements. However, it is estimated that Wilmington has the potential to generate $279,000 in annual revenue as a multi-town site.

Water and sewer commissioners, for the most part, said they support the regionalization of septage because there's not enough septage in the region to support each town having a separate facility. They said if Wilmington was chosen as a multi-town site for other communities, it would save ratepayers money and generate much needed revenue for the town. Commissioners maintained such a facility would have no real impact as there would be no odors and the material would be pre-treated.

New center for the blind

A new drop in center program will be started by the Lowell Association for the Blind Monday, Sept. 21 at the Association office, 174 Central St., Lowell. The center will be open for the blind and visually impaired people who live in the Greater Lowell area, and will be scheduled from 10 a.m. to noon on most Mondays except holiday periods.

Cynthia Reed, program coordinator for the Association said that the program on Sept. 21 would be a presentation of exercise and recreation activity including discussion of group walking opportunities. Representatives of local health center programs will be on hand for the discussion. Future programs will include Old Time Radio programs, music and singing, presentations on nutrition, new assistive aids available for the blind and visually impaired, and programs planned around holiday themes. Each weekly program will also include open time for meeting friends and socialization.

The drop in center is new for the Lowell Association and Reed has asked that any blind or visually impaired person who would like to learn more about the plan, call the LAB office at 454-5704. A schedule of planned activities through December is available at the office, 174 Central St., Lowell and will be mailed upon request.

Partnership vote reversed

by Arlene Surprenant
Though most of the Wilmington School Committee agreed Wednesday it would be "virtually impossible" to put a preschool program in effect by January, committeemen reversed their thinking and agreed to at least keep the lines of communication open between the school system and local businesses.

In a four-to-three vote, the committee reversed a previous decision not to discuss the Business/School Partnership or any of its activities, including a daycare component, until a new superintendent is hired. Members John DeMarco, Phil Fenton, Brad Jackson, and Chairman Bob Peterson voted both to reconsider the previous action and to reopen discussion. Dr. Shirley Callan, Peggy Kane, and Linda McMenimen opposed the two motions.

Fenton made the motion to reconsider the previous vote saying the schools had been taking from the businesses in the Partnership and now it was time "to give back a little bit." He added that he viewed the previous decision as a "gag order."

Some members pointed out since the coordinator's position was not funded in the school budget, it was not right to keep bringing up the Partnership. They said they would be more comfortable discussing the Partnership and the possibility of a daycare program at the high school once a new superintendent is hired or if and when local businesses agree to fund all or part of the coordinator's salary.

To Dr. Callan, the issue was money.

"We simply don't have the money; it's that simple," she said. Callan added, "We're not in the business of running a program in plastic that we can ill-afford."

McMenimen agreed with her saying, "my priority is K to 12." Kane disagreed with Fenton's statement that the businesses had been doing all the "giving" and pointed out that performing art students had performed at local companies and the firms would be getting more well-rounded graduates. She urged the board to look at daycare and the continuation of the Partnership as two separate issues.

Supt. William Fay maintained Partnership members are not "holding a gun" to the school committee over the preschool issue. He said members were simply "disappointed" with the turnaround of the board because it seemed the committee supported the Partnership at a summer meeting and now members wanted to put everything on the back burner. "It's the yo-yo principle. We're really turning people away from something very vital to a community," noted Demarco, the board's liaison with the Business Partnership.

After the vote to reverse its decision, Jackson directed the superintendent not to make any changes to Coordinator Al Fessenden's teaching load unless money for his salary is forthcoming from the Partnership.

It's YOUR Money

BY JOYCE BRISBOIS

ABOUT LUMP SUM DISTRIBUTIONS

When you leave the firm you worked for, whether for retirement or another job, you may take with you a lump sum of money representing your vested interest in a pension fund, a profit-sharing fund or a savings plan like a 401(k). What will you do with it?

Most likely, this money has not yet been taxed. That's why the smartest move, usually, is to roll it over into an IRA. For those going on to another job, it's a good idea to open a new IRA for the money so that it can be rolled over into another company plan later.

If you simply use the funds as current cash, you must pay taxes on the amount and, in some cases, a 10 percent penalty if you're not yet 59 1/2. One loophole is five or ten-year averaging of funds (depending on your age) for tax purposes. It's important to note, though, that you cannot take both rollovers and special tax averaging in the same year, even from different funds. If you wish to take both options, it's advisable to have some of the funds paid the next year.

News in Brief

Walkathon

The annual Walkathon, sponsored by the Wilmington Community Fund, will get underway at the Town Common on Sunday, September 27 at 1 p.m. Walkers young and old are urged to register and pick up pledge cards at local schools.

Last year, 111 residents participated in the walk and collected $5,484 for the Community Fund. That money helps local groups and residents in need.

Storage of Flammables

Kirkwood Technical Publications Inc. was granted permission by Wilmington selectmen Monday to increase its above ground storage of flammable chemicals, by approximately 300 gallons. The company recently expanded its facility and now has to store additional chemicals on site. The request for a license received a favorable recommendation from the local fire department. Selectmen voted unanimously to abide by the department's recommendation.

Board of Appeals

Wilmington selectmen are seeking a resident to fill an associate's position on the local board of appeals. Neil Buckley has turned down a reappointment as an associate member creating a vacancy on the board. Associates do not have voting power but have a part in decisions made by the board. The board of appeals meets twice a month.

Gift of Land

Thelma Grassia of Chestnut Street has donated a portion of land abutting her own to the Wilmington Conservation Commission. On Monday, selectmen signed the deed approving the transfer following the recommendation of Town Manager Michael Cairn.

Board to hire new physical ed. teacher

by Arlene Surprenant
A majority of the Wilmington School Committee agreed Wednesday to hire a physical education teacher to fill a prior vacancy and to recall both a music and art teacher. The money for these salaries will come from the unemployment account and $282,000 in state funds.

The most controversial part of the discussion was over the recommendation of Supt. William Fay to restore the physical education position. Previously, the position had been filled by a long term substitute teacher. Fay argued that hiring a new instructor would allow an elementary physical education teacher to use her training to teach a health program at the elementary level, it would make better use of existing staff, and afford more preparation time to elementary teachers.

Chairman Bob Peterson supported the superintendent's recommendation as did the rest of the men on the committee. They felt the position should be filled by a teacher and not a long term sub.

Peggy Kane argued there were other ways to fill the position. Dr. Shirley Callan urged the committee to use the money to buy textbooks especially at the fifth grade level, where there are reports that some students lack books. Peterson retorted that, at an earlier meeting, he was the only committeeman to support using the state grant for textbooks.

Linda McMenimen targeted the person in line for the position saying he had already revealed to some people he would get the nod from Fay.

"I don't like doing business that way," she said.

Brad Jackson noted that the recommendation has merit and meets the board's moral obligation to provide a safe atmosphere for students and teachers.

The motion to restore the position passed four to three. Voting against the motion were Kane, Callan, and McMenimen.

Carbon to solve water problem?

by Arlene Surprenant

The recent taste and odor problem in Wilmington's water supply has been attributed to a carbon problem.

The carbon, which absorbs organics in the water supply and is used as a filter, will be replaced at the Butters Row Treatment Plant over a three day period beginning September 21, according to Water and Sewer Supt. Paul Niman. The Water and Sewer Commission has approved the use of bituminous based carbon rather than lignite based carbon because the latter has not yet been used extensively. Niman said Thursday his department hopes the carbon replacement solves the problem. Despite the taste and some odor, Niman assures the public the water has been tested and is safe to drink.

Arrowheads on agenda at Harnden Tavern

by Capt. Larz Neilson

Are there any persons in the vicinity who might want to hear a discussion about "Indian" arrowheads? The members of the Wilmington Historical Commission seem to think the answer is yes.

A fairly large collection of arrowheads are in the Joshua Harnden Tavern, in North Wilmington. The tavern is on Salem Street, where that street is crossed by Woburn Street.

Ernest Eames, Wilmington resident, for many years a member of the Wilmington Grange, and for many years the caretaker of Wildwood Cemetery was the person who collected most of those arrowheads from the grounds of the cemetery.

The publisher of the Town Crier, Capt. Larz Neilson, added to the collection with a few choice arrowheads which he has found, from time to time.

Mr. Eames has long since passed on to his reward. Capt. Neilson has not.

The Wilmington Historical Commission has asked the publisher of the Town Crier to discuss those arrowheads, in a public session. The discussion will be in the Harnden Tavern Sunday, October 4. It is scheduled to start at 1 p.m.

Bringing home the bacon

Congressional candidates claiming to be able to "bring home the bacon" might want a lesson from Roger Lauze of the Mass. Society of Prevention of Cruelty to Animals (MSPCA). Animal Control Officer Ellen Davis (right) was called to Pineridge Road in North Wilmington last week for a stray pig. It turned out to belong to Joe Parrella of North Street. Wilbur had broken the fence in her pen and gone out to destroy a lawn. Convincing Wilbur to go home was not easy.

Pig in a bucket

The problem was quickly taken care of when the MSPCA arrived. Roger put a bucket over the pig's head, and Joe steered the tail. Voila, Wilbur was quickly put back in her pen. Yes, Wilbur's a she.

Don't sour the well

by Larz F. Neilson

How much should a town manager be paid?

Wilmington selectmen are wrestling with that question right now, working on a new contract with Town Manager Michael Caira.

Caira has done an extremely good job for the town. He has brought in the town budget on line, negotiated with town unions for them to give up pay raises, and remained fairly popular while doing so.

One town employee said, "Buzz gave everyone raises, and they all hated him. Mike is taking the raises away, and they love him."

Caira has been receiving $65,000 a year, which is fair to middlin' for a man in his job. Some of the town department heads have progressed to a point — usually with a great deal of seniority, mind you — where they are earning more than the manager.

The superintendent of schools also earns more than does Caira, to the tune of $15,000, plus another $8,000 for "expenses," although he need not itemize.

If you were in Caira's shoes, you'd probably want a raise, too.

But should the town give him one? That is another question.

Fay's salary became the topic of nearly every discussion about school affairs. While it is true that Fay was doing a good job, his salary eclipsed all his shining accomplishments. It is probably the primary issue which led to the non-renewal of his contract.

If the town manager insists on a large salary increase, he could similarly sour the well on his own job. To be more specific, how will he convince the town unions to accept low increases if he himself has just taken a large raise?

Sometimes, leadership by good example involves some sacrifice.

The town is able to balance its budget, but that does not mean the budget is flush. A dollar spent on a raise for the manager means a dollar taken away from another department. There are services that have been cut and people laid off.

Right now, many people in town are having to sacrifice. There are many people out of work, and a great many hardship cases. The town does not cut any slack on the tax bill for many of these people.

The $65,000 salary that he is earning might not be the highest in town, but it is certainly more — much, much more — than that of many people who are paying the taxes.

Yes, Caira is doing a good job — but he also has a good job. How many people on your street make a $65,000 salary?

We hope that nobody will interpret this as negative towards Mr. Caira. He is a highly competent individual and seems to be the right man for the job he is in. It would be a shame if he allowed the issue of a salary increase to poison the water in which he must work.

Mid September ushers in the New England Country Fairs.

Here in Massachusetts the two premier fairs are the Big E (Eastern States Exposition) held out in West Springfield, and the Topsfield Fair, here in Topsfield.

The Big E starts on Wednesday, Sept. 16 and runs through Sunday, September 27. Nearly one million visitors pass through the turnstiles at Eastern States every September, making this fair the largest in New England. I attended Eastern States about 10 years ago, and I must say that I was not impressed. For several reasons, including (a) it is much too commercial (as opposed to agricultural) and (b) it reminds me of a gigantic flea market. Now mind you, I have nothing against flea markets, and I get to several every summer and fall, but when I attend what is billed as a country or agricultural fair, that's what I expect to find. My estimate is that the Big E is 80 percent commercial (games of chance, tables of knick knacks, fast food, etc.) and 20 percent agricultural. If you attend, wear good walking shoes because the layout is immense. The Eastern States Exposition is one of those things you might wish to do every eight or 10 years.

On the other side of the fair spectrum is the Topsfield Fair. This fair, which attracts over a half million visitors each fall, begins on Saturday, October 3 and runs through Monday, October 12, Columbus Day. What I like about Topsfield is that this fair, after 150 years, still retains a lot of old fashioned rural atmosphere. Yes, there are games of chance and tons of fast food, but there is also an excellent mix of traditional country and agricultural activities. Included are flower and vegetable barns, 4-H and Grange exhibits, beekeeping, horse and oxen pulling, a poultry section and art and craft exhibits. This fair truly has something for everyone.

And let us not forget the number one giant pumpkin contest held on the east coast! The Ninth Annual All New England pumpkin weigh-off takes place on the last day of the fair, Monday October 12, and commences at 10:30 a.m. in the Essex County Courtyard. Pumpkin growers from all over New England will lug their monsters to Topsfield on that day, to compete for the $4,500.00 in prize money. (First prize for the heaviest pumpkin is $2,000.00). Last year's winner, George Brooks of Tewksbury, will attempt to make it two in a row. George has another very impressive pumpkin this year, and will be out to top his record shattering New England standard of 617 pounds. Fifty entrants are expected and your correspondent will be entering a pumpkin which, hopefully, will be among the top 10.

Plan to take the entire family to Topsfield Fair this year. It is a great way to spend an early fall evening, or weekend day.

letter to the editor

Dear Larz:

As one of the patients at Tewksbury Hospital Hathorne Units, I am offended at the articles you have allowed to be printed in your paper.

First of all; we are not criminals. We all have problems in our lives, no matter who we are, some stronger than others.

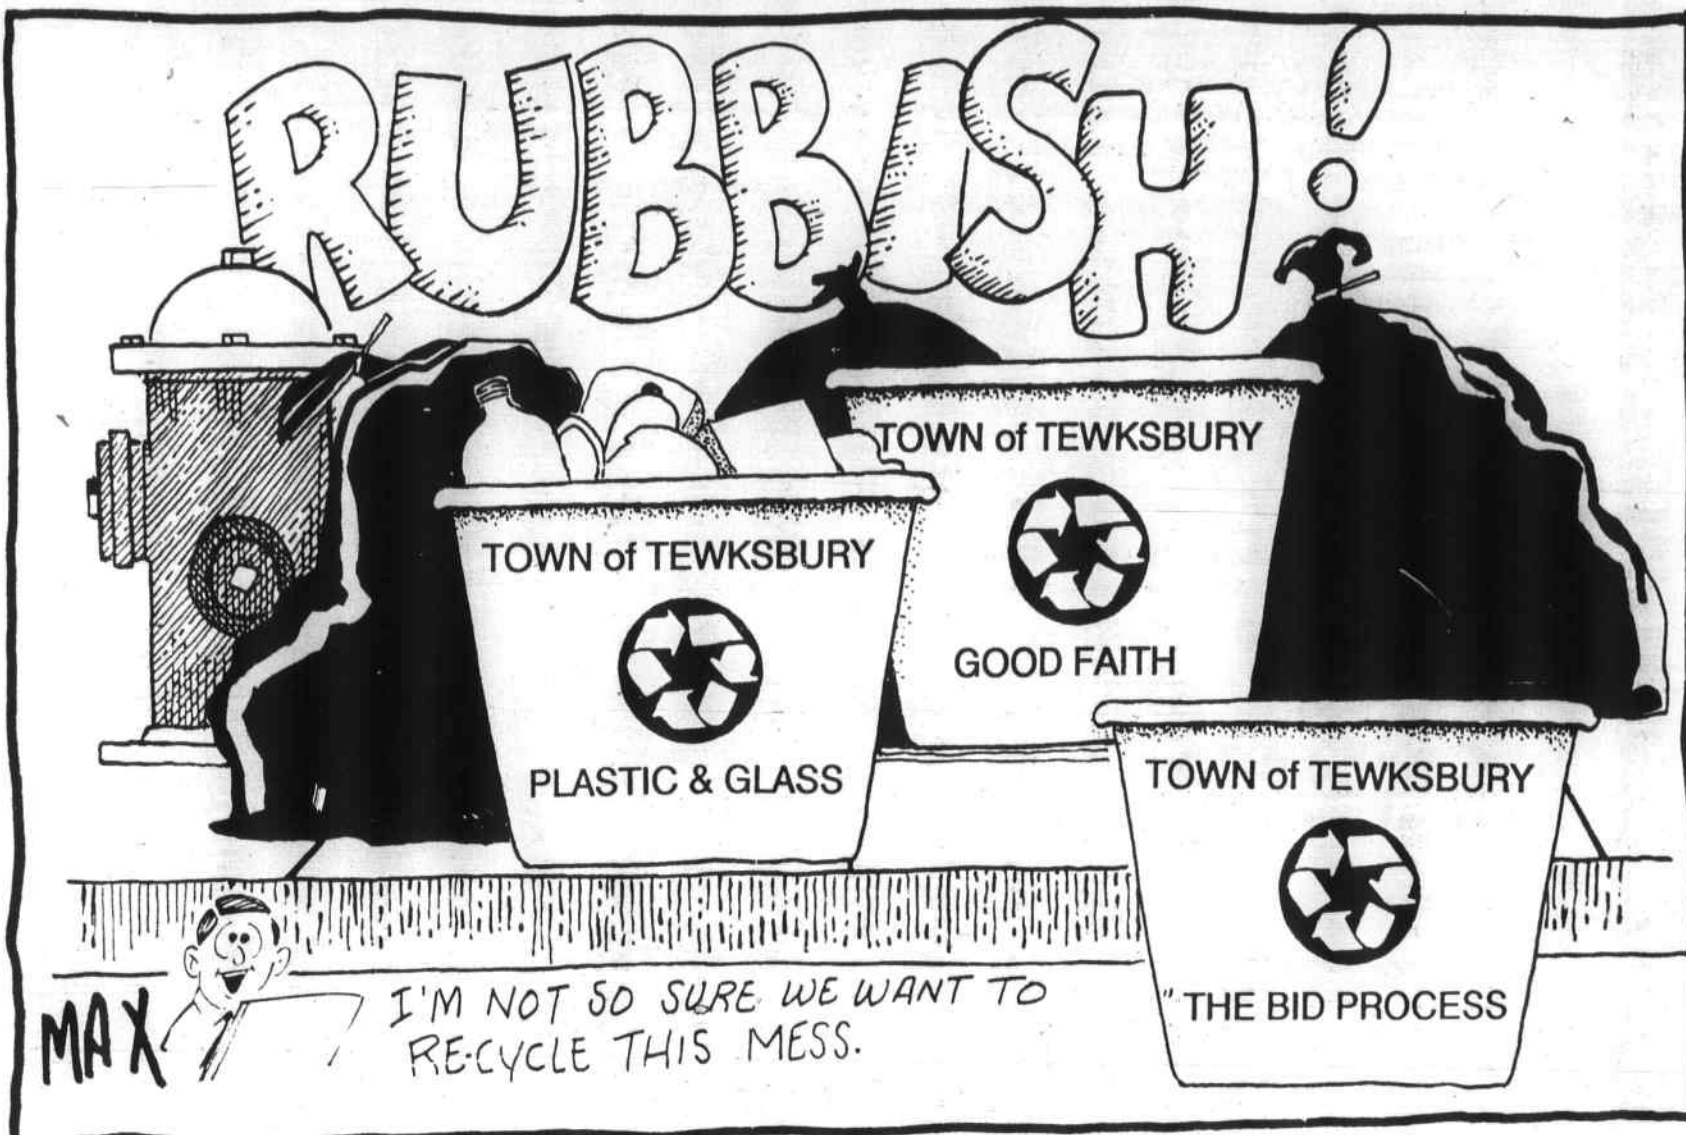

Second of all; we were not locked in our rooms the night of the fire on C4. We were all put into the safest area of the hospital and its grounds.

At no time are any of the Hathorne Units' patients locked in their rooms.

Third of all, the patients of these units really didn't want to come to Tewksbury and leave the hospital at Danvers. It was a matter of our fearless leader, Gov. Weld, making a stupid decision that put the patients and townspeople of Tewksbury in an uproar.

So please, get your stories straight!!

Sincerely,
Lori A. Cook, D4

frankly speaking

by Kevin John Sowyrda

Now that the firestorm of controversy surrounding local school chief Bill Fay has subsided to smoldering political embers, Wilmington has a paramount responsibility to engage in a superintendent search which is comprehensive in nature and steered by one principal objective — to recruit the very best education leader available.

Public education hasn't been a notably fashionable issue for very long. There was a time when the schools were a peripheral question and the topic was often delegated to back-burner politics. But if there was one contribution made by William Bennett, the feisty education secretary in the Ronald Reagan administration, it was to get America talking about the public schools and the fact that we lag far behind our principal global competitors, the Europeans and Japanese.

In the 1990s, the agenda isn't just education talk but education reform. Both of the major political parties finally agree that schools need fixing, though legislation has been stymied over how to execute the repairs. Democrats and Republicans have focused their debate on money, as usual.

One repair that is fortunately out of the clumsy hands of the politicians is today in the hands of regular, work-for-a-living people in Wilmington. Choosing a superintendent of schools will decide the tone and direction of public education just as the country has found itself part of a new world where America, of late, feels like a second cousin.

How we teach our kids about that world and what our role in it should be rests in large part on the shoulders of men and women who lead the American public school system. Before they can do anything, school committees and the public have to trust them and grant the authority to do the job that needs to be done.

So here's a few suggestions for the school committee:

First, appoint Mike Caira to the screening committee. Enough of this "town-side" vs. "school-side" fratricide. The town manager can provide an insight from the budgetary perspective on qualifications needed in a new superintendent. The Caira appointment also creates a link between town hall and the Roman House, two buildings more accustomed to hurling bombs at each other than cooperating.

Second, forget the traditional and out-dated three year contract. I'm all for term limitations, but not where public education is concerned. If you chose a superintendent with a glowing resume rich with accomplishments, give him or her the chance to implement real, positive change. That means a six year contract and the job security that goes with it. Just spare us any silly expense accounts or mileage reimbursements.

Third, charge the new superintendent with examining the concept of regionalization. As enrollments decline and budgets shrink, municipalities have to shed their territorial instincts and consolidate resources with other towns for the benefit of the kids.

Fourth, hire a superintendent who believes in school based management. The school chief has six deputies and they are the principals. They should finally be empowered to meet two objectives — educating kids and saving money.

We've treated principals like lunchroom maids long enough. Decentralize the system, create an individual budget for each school building and whatever school performs best receives a five percent bonus the following year. Those that don't work will be consolidated.

By making the schools competitive within the community, the achievement level of kids will become the prime issue driving the thinking of educators.

If Wilmington ever had the vision to do this, watch the cover of Time, Newsweek and the New York Times for additional coverage.

Fifth, empower parents and make them an integral part of the schooling process as they once were. Families are still around, they've just changed. By empowering them the school system will draw their interest and active participation. Under school based management, parent councils should formulate budgets with the principals and have a direct say in exactly how money will be spent in their kids' schools.

Sixth and lastly, establish a new covenant with the superintendent to deal with policy and not personalities. Within our lifetime we'll enter a new century. To be competitive in it, the schools may be our last hope. There won't be time for bickering. Instead, there's just enough time left for reform.

The unbelievable amount of money the oil dealers of New England are spending on radio advertising to keep you from converting to Natural Gas Heat ... WHY?

Busy week at United Methodist Church

The start of the Sunday School year, last Sunday, and a major two day planning event for their whole congregation, highlight a busy week at the Wilmington United Methodist Church, 87 Church St., as the new fall season is underway this week.

An expanded 10 church school classes, serving a wide span of ages from three to the oldest adults, and including newly separated junior and senior high classes, met for registration and their first sessions on Sunday the 13th, with 66 pupils registering on the first Sunday.

Registration continues this Sunday when many more students are expected to enroll for the Church School. Students meet every Sunday from September to June, with a gathering time in the sanctuary from 9 to 9:15 a.m., and then move to their individual classes from 9:15 to 10:15.

With the new fall schedule, morning worship at the church is celebrated at 8:15 a.m., an informal communion service, or at 10:30 a.m. for family worship, with a children's activity time for elementary children, and child care for pre-schoolers and infants. The elementary age young people are invited to worship with parents for the first half of the service, and then adjourn to special activities planned for them during the second half of the worship hour, following a special "Children's Moments" segment of the worship.

The churches Congregational Planning Event, to be held this Friday evening at the church starting at 7 and continuing Saturday morning at 8:30 will involve the whole congregation in reflections on the history and purpose of the church, some explorations of the demographic makeup of the congregation and the community it serves, and some visioning of future directions for the church's program and ministry. A special task force has been gathering information, making charts and laying plans for the event for several months.

The two day session will be led by the Rev. Wesley Allen, a planning consultant from the United Methodist Church's Office of Finance and Field Service, based in New York City. He will help participants not only set future goals for the church, but also begin to develop some action plans which will lead to eventual detailed work on specific events and programs, as well as a budgeting process for the church.

All members and friends of the church are encouraged to attend. Child care will be provided for both sessions.

Voter registration

A voter registration session has been scheduled for Friday, Sept. 18, from 8:30 a.m. to 8 p.m. at the Town Hall.

Elizabeth Carey, Town Clerk, informs residents who have not registered to vote that this is the final day to register so as to be eligible to vote at the upcoming special town meeting.

Residents may register to vote during regular office hours, Monday through Friday from 8:30 a.m. to 4:30 p.m. and Tuesday evenings from 7 to 8:30.

Company treads international waters

by Brad Parmenter

Perhaps the only region that can understand economic hard times any better than Massachusetts is the former Soviet Union. A Wilmington company is looking to possibly ease the burden. E.M. Parker on Research Drive, a company that produces medical imagery equipment and surgical items, has taken part in an Czechoslovakian trade mission. According to company president Ed Parker, the mission involved small companies, with less than ten employees, doing up to a million dollars of sales a year, to companies the size of E.M. Parker, which does $50 million worth of annual sales and employs 70 people, to very large companies, who are already widely recognized. The mission was organized by Governor William Weld. Parker was pleased with the governor and the results of the mission. "Governor Weld is imaginative, creative and easy to work with," said Parker. "I think the governor's plan to go with all these companies will help to regenerate the entrepreneur spirit. E.M. Parker has done business in Ukraine, Kiev and Odessa. The company's international trade division has been open for a year and a half. Parker welcomes the expansion. "We are looking to move to a larger facility," said Parker. The new facility would cover a 100,000 to 120,000 square feet, he said. In 1991, the firm hosted an exchange between the U.S. and Ukrainian businessmen. The name of that project, now out of date, was the U.S.-U.S.S. Citizens Bridge. Parker said he was excited about the possibility of finding new markets. "The possibilities are endless, said Parker, they are ready to make the privatization process work. He said he felt the time was right for any company that wished to have an international expansion.

Nick Daniloff, Director of Northeastern University School of Journalism, who covered the Soviet Union for U.S. News and World Report, agreed. "This is the most open period in Russian history, a Western businessman could do well by expanding," said Daniloff.

Parker said that he saw domestic benefits in international expansion, as well. "This (trade mission) will not only generate a cooperative spirit between nations, but between Massachusetts companies on all levels," said Parker. "If new markets are discovered over there, it will increase the financial health of state-side organizations. He said that international expansion would add to financial strength and job stability. Parker said the trade mission had already resulted in cooperation between his and company and another Massachusetts medical company, Copley Pharmaceutical. The two companies are going to package generic drugs for distribution in the East. "The need for basic medication over there is staggering," said Parker, "this is strictly humanitarian aid."

Parker exhorted other businesses to follow suit. "There are markets to be had over there," he said, "Let's make it happen." Parker said he felt international trade would not only move products but create new jobs. "That is something all of us (businesses) should be committed to," Parker is scheduled to return to Czechoslovakia is November.

Librarian granted one year leave

by Arlene Surprenant

A local librarian will leave the Wilmington School System for one year to work in the Brookline School System, thanks to a majority vote of the local school committee. Only Peg Kane and Brad Jackson opposed the motion.

Middle school librarian Donna Mott was granted the leave Wednesday against the recommendation of Supt. William Fay. Fay told the board leaves are traditionally granted only if a staff member is seeking a different career. Mott explained she applied for the new position this summer after she was laid off by the committee. Brookline still "pursued" her, she added, even after the committee recalled her at summer's end.

Dr. Shirley Callan suggested an exception be made in this case because of the position in which rified teachers are placed. She said she supported the request without precedent.

"This is one battle with you I don't mind losing," said Fay. He explained, because of board policy, he had no choice but to make a negative recommendation.

Fay said he could fill the position within one week with a newly hired librarian.

Coming events

'Meet the League' night next Tuesday

The League of Women Voters of Wilmington (LWVW) will welcome residents of Tewksbury and Wilmington to its "Meet the League Membership Night," Tuesday, September 22 at 4th of July Headquarters from 7:30 to 9. Anyone interested in learning more about the League and its activities is invited to attend.

Members of the LWVW will be on hand to explain the purpose of the organization, to describe its non-partisan voter service activities, and to discuss current studies on issues of critical concern to all citizens. While the League's Candidates' Night and the voters' guide to local elections are familiar to many residents, its other activities are less well known. For example, last April LWVW published "Your Town Meeting Guide," a pamphlet to help voters understand the parliamentary procedures followed at Town Meeting. The group also awards a scholarship each year to a senior graduating from WHS.

This year League members will take part in studies on health care, Massachusetts fiscal policy, ethics in government, and wetlands protection, in addition to conducting many voter service activities. If these issues sound interesting to you, please stop by 4th of July Headquarters September 22 for more information and light refreshments.

If you are unable to attend, but would like more information about the League of Women Voters, call Martha Stevenson at 658-5488, or mail your inquiry to LWVW, P.O. Box 149, Wilmington, MA 01887.

Talk back to the bully

Ms. Bombardieri's self-esteem dialogue technique will help you learn how to be more creative and productive by disarming the critical voice that saps your self-esteem, energy, concentration and competence.

Plan to join the WIB at the Royal Dynasty Restaurant, 217 Lowell St., Wilmington at noon. Cost for the luncheon meeting is $8 for members and $10 for non-members. Reservations are required. Call the Chamber office at 508-657-7211.

POSTURE - IT'S IMPORTANT!
 Your spine houses and protects your nervous system. It carries the spinal cord. The spinal nerves which innervate all your organs and muscles exit between the vertebrae. Your posture therefore is important in maintaining your overall health. Poor posture predisposes you to injury during activity.

 Gentle, individual chiropractic care for all ages

This hospital is close to my home. After my procedure, it's also close to my heart.

Meet Joseph Sardo. Like many people, Joe thought the best medical care was way down the pike, not around the corner. Until he learned from his cardiologist, Dr. Aubrey Dickman, that he had a blockage of the artery in his left leg. That was when he was referred to Dr. Mark Connaughton at the New England Memorial Hospital Center for Interventional Radiology.

As a highly skilled specialist, Dr. Connaughton was able to diagnose and treat Joe's vascular disorder non-surgically, performing a balloon angioplasty. Aided by the unique technology of a state-of-the-art digital imaging system not available at most hospitals, Dr. Connaughton and his trained team were able to perform the corrective procedure precisely without having Joe undergo the risk and trauma of major surgery. Joe felt very little pain, went home the next day, and recuperated in no time.

While some people are surprised that such breakthrough medical care is available so close to home, it's no longer a surprise to Joe Sardo. For the latest in quality patient care, he looks no further than his own community hospital.

For more information on the Center for Interventional Radiology, call (617) 979-7050. For a physician referral, call (617) 979-7005.

Local students enrolled at Colby-Sawyer College

Stacey Ouellette, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Paul Ouellette and Christine Stevens, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tolbert Stevens, all of Wilmington, have arrived to begin their freshman years at Colby-Sawyer College, New London, N.H.
Stacey and Christine are both nursing majors.

Nurses in Yale Unit were close to action

by Capt. Larz Neilson
The Wilmington Historical Commission, in its Sept. 14 meeting was presented with a picture of the Wilmington High School Class of 1934. Member Frank West had seen it in a Boston store, and recognized the principal's name, J. Turner Hood.

"It must be a picture of a Wilmington High School class" he told the commission.

So it was, and one of the young ladies shown was Bernice Neilson, sister of the publisher of the Town Crier.

Bernice, a registered nurse, served in the US Army during World War II, and was nearly killed by a Japanese soldier. Possibly the story will be of interest.

Bernice, and her cousin Margaret (Peggy) were serving in the "Yale Unit" of Army nurses. Peggy was the daughter of Edward and Mildred Neilson of Wilmington. Their home was (and still is) on Glen Road, near the present Wilmington Town Hall. The Yale Unit was sent to New Zealand, in the early part of the war, and was attached to the Third Marines.

Where the Third Marines went, the Yale Unit went - Guadalcanal, and the islands to the north, one after another. There was plenty to keep the nurses of the Yale Unit busy.

Some time about 1944 the Yale Unit was in Saipan. There had been intensive fighting with Japanese soldiers, and it seemed to be finished.

Bernice and another nurse were walking outside of the "hospital grounds" one evening. Everything was quiet.

Then a Japanese soldier lunged at them, rifle lowered, bayonet ready. He was only a few feet away.

An American soldier happened to be in the vicinity, with a loaded rifle. He did a quick "aim and fire." The Japanese soldier dropped dead.

From where he lay, in death, to the two nurses was exactly six feet.

Wilmington police news

During the week ending September 15, Wilmington police officers responded to 31 alarms, four assaults, 10 reports of disorderly conduct, made six arrests, issued a restraining order, assisted other departments on two occasions and quelled a domestic problem.

Seven larcenies were reported, five non-criminal complaints were taken, 11 public services were performed, three threat complaints were logged, 12 traffic accidents were investigated along with three trail bike complaints, seven incidents of vandalism and seven reports of suspicious activity.

Medical assistance was rendered on 12 occasions and one burglary was reported.

Arrests

Tuesday two men were arrested in separate incidents. At 11 a.m. Carl Brassell, 33, of Lowell was arrested by Officer Charley Fiore (off duty at the time) assisted by Officers Shepard and Begonis. The incident took place at Mickey's Variety Store on Shawshen Avenue where Brassell was charged with two counts of shoplifting. The suspect was identified from a previous larceny at the same store and was taken to Woburn Court for arraignment.

At three o'clock that same afternoon, Officer Jon Shepard drove to Lowell District Court to arrest Michael F. Stecchi, 22, of Dracut on the basis of a default warrant.

Tuesday night, Sgt. McCue and Officer Steve Mauriello arrested a James of Joseph Angier, address unknown, after a foot chase down the railroad tracks from the center railroad station. Angier was charged with larceny of services on the MBTA train from Lowell.

Railroad police also hold a warrant for Joseph Angier charging him with assault and battery by means of a dangerous weapon on a railroad employee.

The suspect was held overnight for lack of positive identification, to appear in Woburn Court on Wednesday, where he plead guilty and accepted 10 days in the house of correction rather than produce proof of his proper identification. A follow-up investigation by Insp. Chris Neville, using fingerprints, taken the night of the arrest, resulted in identifying a suspect as Steven Angier, 32, currently residing at the house of correction.

At midnight, Wednesday, Officers Paul Jepson and David Sugrue arrested Richard F. Estes, Jr., 24 of Old Shawshen Street, Tewksbury. Estes was charged with larceny of patio furniture. He was bailed for Woburn Court Thursday.

At 1:30 a.m. Thursday, Officer Bob Richter arrested David M. Gaffney, 30 of Texas Road, Tewksbury. Gaffney was charged with operating under the influence of liquor, improper passing, speeding and driving so as to endanger the public. The arrest was made after the suspect was stopped at Middlesex and High streets. He was released on bail for Thursday at Woburn District Court.

Thursday morning Officer Jim Hanlon arrested Scott Merrill, 32 of Billerica after a traffic stop on Marion Street. Merrill was charged with operating after suspension of his drivers license and was taken directly to Woburn Court.

Wilmington senior topics

Blood pressure/diabetes
The nurse will be at the Buzzell Senior Center, 15 School St., Thurs., Sept. 17, from 1:30 p.m., when she will be administering blood pressure and diabetes tests. Diabetes is an illness that can be active in the body unknown to anyone until it can become a serious medical problem. It is important when getting along in years to have a diabetes test regularly.

If the test shows a rise of sugar in the blood, depending on how high the sugar level is, Ann can suggest you check with your doctor. Most of the time it will require a diet. For your own benefit, if you have not had a diabetes test for sometime, you should drop in at the center Thursday and have one taken.

Hearing aid specialist
The hearing aid specialist will be at the Center Friday, Sept. 18. He will check the hearing of seniors and hearing aids for proficiency starting at 9 a.m.

Mammography screening
Nurse Ann has arranged to have Mobile Diagnostic Inc. bring their mobile van to the town hall parking lot Tuesday, Sept. 29 from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. for mammography screening. This service is accredited by the American College of Radiology. Medicare will cover 80 percent of the allowable cost of a mammogram every other year. Our insurance supplement coverage should cover the remaining 20 percent. Ann will be taking appointments the week of September 14 and 21. She will give you all the information you will need at that time. The telephone number of the Town Hall is 658-3311. Ask for the nurse.

Fuel assistance
The Fuel Assistance Program will begin November 1 and extend to March 31. Applications will begin October 5 for seniors who did not apply last year on appointments only. Call the center if you would like to apply for fuel. I do not have the income levels yet or the amount of the allotments. When I receive them they will be in this column. In the mean time it would be wise to have a copy of your Social Security and pensions made. If both checks go to the bank, keep your next statement for proof of income. Seniors who received assistance last year should be receiving their applications through the mail in September and October.

Please check your application when it arrives, cross out any incorrect information and write the correct information in. Make sure all members of your household are listed. Also make sure you sign the application where it is requested and include a copy of a pension or a bank statement if the pension is sent to the bank. It is not necessary to send a copy of your Social Security check or SSI the Community.

Teamwork already has a copy. You will have to send back your application sent through the mail by October 31. If information is missing from your application it will be sent back to you for the missing information. When it is returned it will be put aside until over 30,000 applications are processed. That could mean before they got back to your application again the money allotted could be gone. So please make sure you check the application and send all material requested as proof of income or household members.

Podiatrist Dr. Casey, will be at the center to check and treat ailments of the feet on Wed., Sept. 30 starting at 10 a.m.

Thanks
Please accept Tom and my thanks for all the prayers and cards sent to him during his hospital confinement. We both know it was through the many prayers all of you said for him that brought him through. Our heartfelt thanks to all.

John Perreault was a true teacher

A life marked by tenacity, toughness

by Rick Cooke

Tewksbury High School assistant principal Tony Romano summed up the feelings of many who were on hand to mourn the loss of John Perreault Sunday night at the O'Donnell Funeral Home in Lowell. "John Perreault touched the lives of these boys many years ago at Tewksbury High School," offered Romano as he took my hand. "They were boys then, but they are men now. John Perreault had a profound effect on all of their lives."

Yes, we are men now. Twenty-two years ago I was fortunate enough to meet John Perreault as a 15-year-old boy. He changed my life, showing me how to achieve in the face of adversity and teaching me the meaning of the word tenacity. I am a man now, and not a boy, because of the teaching and coaching of John Perreault.

John Perreault was toughness and tenacity personified. That is the way he lived, and it is the way he died, battling brain and spinal cancer for two and one-half years until that battle ended last Thursday at the Prescott House in North Andover.

It did not surprise me that John gave death a battle, that he chose to wage a stubborn war right up until the end. Two years ago when he came back to lead the Tewksbury High School baseball team to a conference championship after a 20 year hiatus from coaching baseball, one got the sense that even then, having been diagnosed with the cancer, that John Perreault was fearless, believing that eventually all would be well.

As I sat there on the TMHS baseball bench talking about his disease as if it were a botched bunt sign and then watching him walk away with a pronounced limp, I realized why I had respected this man for these many years. I respected him because he was fearless in the face of adversity. Even then he was coaching and teaching with his own biting, sarcastic style that was designed to drive those around him to be the best that they could possibly be.

That Perreault style of driving his athletes and students to that next level often led to a love-hate relationship with those youngsters that could not, or would not accept his method of teaching. When John first saw me at Tewksbury High School he immediately took a liking to me when he saw that I responded positively to his piercing comments, both in the classroom and on the football field.

I was intelligent enough to know that this man was trying to light a fire under a kid with potential. He often made me achieve just because he made me mad, but more often than not, I was driven to succeed because John Perreault made me think about more than just football.

He gave me the "Perreault Test", and I passed. I didn't back away from him even when he was at his sarcastic best. I knew there was a reason. He got me to think about the fact that life was going to be tough and that my days in high school were the first baby steps through a life that would be filled with tests along the way.

John Perreault never coddled an athlete or a student in his life, and for that reason alone he earned the title of "teacher."

The memories came flooding back Sunday night. The night when he sat with me in his car in front of my house for an hour in 1971 and restored my confidence that had been slowly ebbing away; the open house when he wanted to talk to my mother about football, and not about my English class; and the many days when he encouraged me to write when he realized how much I loved it.

The complex Perreault personality often angered people, but if you got to know him and responded to his methods, he would come back at you with answers and understanding comments.

Many springs ago during his first stint as coach of the Tewksbury High School baseball team, Perreault laid down on the bench and faked a deep sleep with his team down 8-0 at Wilmington. The Tewksbury parents in the stands were furious, and the Wilmington fans just sat open-mouthed. I put my notebook down and just sat there smiling. I knew exactly what John Perreault was doing.

Baseball is generally not an emotional sport, but Perreault got the players on his team so angry with him that they responded with a 'we'll show him' mentality, rallying for a 10-8 victory as the coach 'awoke' from his deep sleep just in time to see his little piece of sideline psychology pay off.

Sunday night many of John's former players came to say a final goodbye. His last team, the Bishop Guertin football squad that he coached four games into last season, wore their football jerseys in an emotional tribute to their coach.

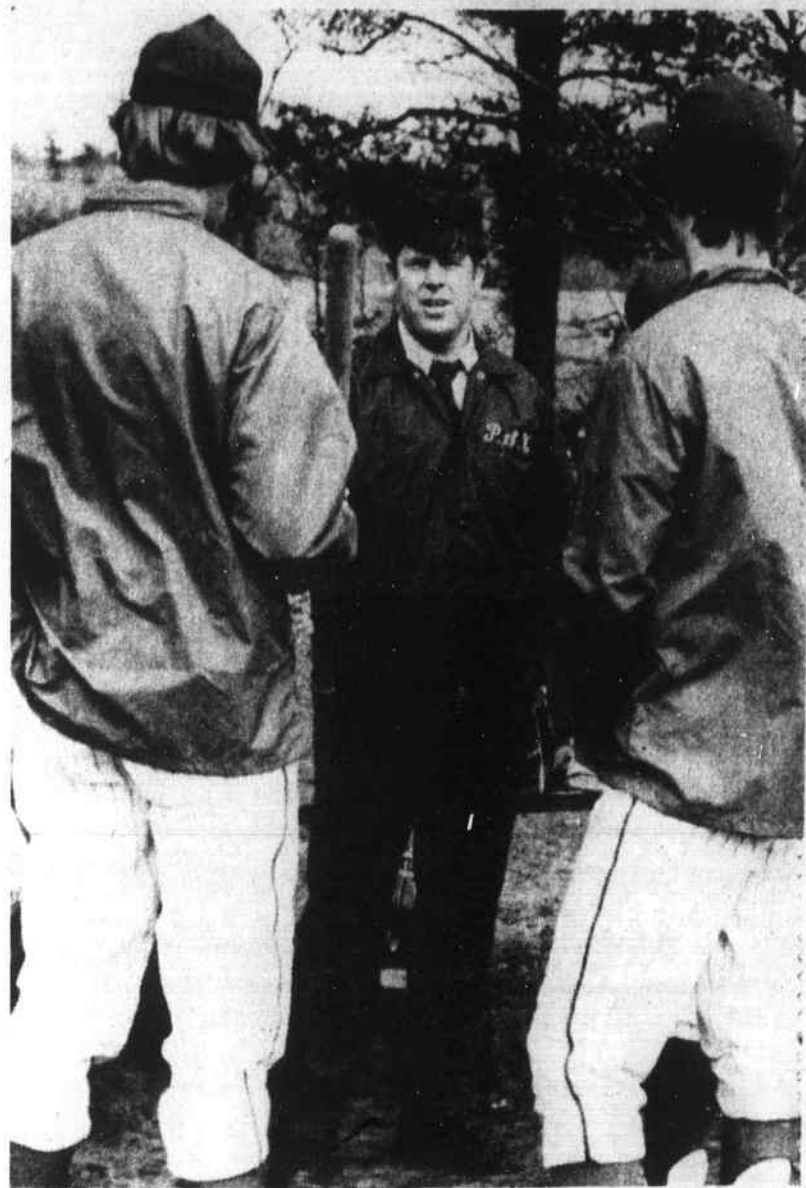

There was a football player quietly standing in the back of the room that was not from Bishop Guertin, and it's been a long time since he played football, but long before John Perreault had a son, he often thought of Charlie Roux as a his son. Roux, the greatest defensive lineman that I ever played with, had John Perreault take him under his wing in 1966, and eventually John pointed me out to Charlie in 1970. "That Cooke kid is a lot like you," surmised Perreault. "Work with him. Show him the way."

I was never the football player that Roux was, but that was quite an experience having a senior all-conference tackle beat your brains out for three months. As a sophomore, I learned a lot about pain and perseverance at precisely that moment.

"John Perreault was a poet, a prophet, my mentor," offered Roux late Sunday night. "I am where I am today because of John Perreault. I'm just glad that I got the chance to hug him and tell him that I loved him."

The real sadness here is that John Perreault will not have the opportunity to offer his guidance to his children Matthew, Michelle and Lauren as they grow up and graduate from high school.

What he gave to his children and to his many students will never be forgotten. God obviously needed a teacher to give some lost soul direction. Heaven now has the perfect man to fill that position. John Perreault is not finished teaching. Not ever.

John is safely home

Safely Home

*I am home in Heaven, dear ones;
Oh, so happy and so bright
There is perfect joy and beauty
In this everlasting light.*

*All the pain and grief is over,
Every restless tossing passed;
I am now at peace forever,
Safely home in Heaven at last.*

*Did you wonder I so calmly
Trode the valley of the shade?
Oh! but Jesus' love illumined
Every dark and fearful glade.*

*And He came Himself to meet me
In that way so hard to tread;*

*And with Jesus' arm to lean on,
Could I have onedoubt or dread?*

*Then you must not grieve so sorely,
For I love you dearly still;
Try to look beyond earth's shadows,
Pray to trust our Father's Will.*

*There is work still waiting for you,
So you must not idly stand;
Do it now, while life remaineth—
You shall rest in Jesus' land.*

*When that work is all completed,
He will gently call you Home;
Oh, the rapture of that meeting,
Oh, the joy to see you come!*

Local football openers

Redmen will pull upset

The Tewksbury and Wilmington High School football teams open their respective 1992 seasons with a pair of games this weekend.

Coach Joe DeGrosso's Redmen will be hoping to rebound from a 4-6-0 season when they travel to Chelmsford Friday night to tangle with the defending Division IIB champions starting at 7:15 p.m.. The Lions were 11-0 a year ago and have lost just six games since 1987.

The Redmen are led by receiver

Jay Mackey, tackle Dan Babine, linebacker Mike Roux, running back Ryan McNeal and first-year starting quarterback Chris Snow.

No Merrimack Valley Conference team has repeated in 14 years, and the pick here is for the Redmen to pull an upset in the opener, 14-6.

Saturday afternoon coach Ed Harrison's Wilmington Wildcats, a disappointing 3-7-0 a year ago, travel to North Reading for a non-conference game against the Hornets.

The Wildcats will feature a veteran team led by 16 seniors that include quarterback John O'Reilly, running backs Tom Killilea and Jay Early, receivers Tom Aprile and Dan Ballou and defensive end-tackle John Burke.

The Wildcats will surprise some people this fall, but Saturday will be no shock when they rip North Reading, 28-6.

Wilmington A' 24 Burlington 18

Phil Bates scored on two Lee Trimarchi passes of 60 yard and 20 yards. Ritchie Gillis scored on a 15 yard run off left tackle and Sean Kerrigan scored on a six yard run. Lee Trimarchi had two interceptions. Outstanding jobs were also turned in by Matt Garrett, Ken Logan, Joe Lapham and Mike MacDonald.

Jimmy Chryst, Steve Ritucci, Shane Warford, Adam Mazza, Pat O'Toole and Matt Roux provided key blocks.

This was a great game that was tied at the end of regulation. Wilmington won the toss and had four plays to score. They scored on their third attempt. Burlington could not score on their four attempts due to superb Wilmington defense.

Wilmington B' 24 Burlington 6

Billy Harrison ran back an 87 yard kickoff return and Bryan Mason had a 47 yard run to the two yard line along with a two yard touchdown run. Billy Harrison also ran for touchdowns of eight and 25 yards.

Scott Hubby, Aaron King, Chris DiJulia and Anthony Accardi played solid games offensively.

Wilmington C' 14- Burlington 0

Paul Heffernen (55 yards) and John Hurst (five yards) scored the Wilmington touchdowns.

Kyle O'Donnell, Chris Butler, Jimmy O'Donnell and Ryan Clancy were the defensive leaders.

Adam DiPasquale, Chris Butler, Kevin Finnerty, Kevin Gillespie, Jason Tildsley and Mike Warford played fine games for the offense.

Wilmington D' 13- Burlington 0

Derek Mazza (eight yard run) and Scott Aldridge (62 yard run) scored the Wilmington touchdowns.

Ryan Moroney, Ed Harrison and Chris Ramsdell were the leaders defensively.

Andrew Campbell, Brian LeBlanc and Joe Cotto played well on offense.

Scott Aldridge's 62 yard run broke open the game. Quarterback Tom Southmayd ran a smooth offense against a stubborn Burlington defense.

Sideline jaunt Paul Heffernen of the Wilmington C' Pop Warner squad breaks free down the sideline enroute to a 55 yard touchdown in his team's 14-0 win over Burlington Sunday.

Lions Club stuns Colonial

Lions Club 3 Col Liquors 2

The biggest shock in the Wilmington Over 35 Softball League came last Wednesday night. This was no fluke, as the Lions Club played its' best game since entering the league. It take 11 innings to finish off the defending champs and this year's first place team.

This was the second straight playoff game for Colonial that reached extra innings. This one was more of a nailbiter, as both pitchers Bobby Noel of Colonial and especially the crafty leftlander Bill Riley of the Lions Club pitched extremely well.

This game of missed opportunities by both teams. In the first inning the Lions left a runner on thirdbase on a double play turned by Colonial. In the bottom half of that inning, John Smith drove in the first run with a sacrifice fly.

In the fourth inning the Lions Club had the bases loaded with one out and Riley the batter. Riley popped up to leftfield, where Jimmy O'Connell made a nice catch and then doubled off the runner at thirdbase. That same inning Colonial had two runners stranded themselves.

The fifth inning featured one of the two heroes of the game for the Lions. Jimmy Swierzynski smacked a solo inside the park homerun to tie it, but in the next inning the Lions again left two runners in scoring position.

In the eighth inning Colonial turned another double play. Bobby Butters led off the bottom half of that inning with a single, but unfortunately for Colonial, he did not advance from there. In the ninth the Lions left two runners on, and again Colonial had a baschit, but could not advance the runner.

The 10th inning was again silent, with both teams stranding a runner. But the 11th was the big and exciting inning. Mike Garbati (who was 3-4) lead off with a single. The next batter reached firstbase on an error, so there were two runners on with nobody out. The next batter, Swierzynski singled in a run to make it 2-1. Ernie Poole then hit a ground ball to second, where the secondbaseman made a controversial throw to thirdbase where he got an out, but the double play was the way to go.

Bill Cleary then got on with an error, scoring another run for two insurance runs for the Lions.

In the bottom of the inning, Joe Carvalho and Rick McCully, the first two batters of the inning, reached on errors. Then Riley got an infield pop up for one out and a sacrifice fly for two outs.

With homerun hitter John Smith representing the winning run, Riley somehow got him to fly out to left.

McNamara 19 Rocco's 1

In the other playoff game, McTire advanced to the finals with a win over Rocco's. McTire again kept its' winning streak going because of their bats. In the first two innings McTire scored a combined 11 runs and had an 11-2 lead.

Rocco's scored eight runs in the fourth inning, all on baschits. Billy Cole, Bill Naimo, Bob Silva and Bill Oatis' three-run double helped drive the comeback.

McTire's bats came back with seven more runs in the sixth. Bob Frongillo had a solid game with a two-run homerun.

Others who contributed were Paul Fullerton (three hits), Jimmy Meehan and Bob McKenzie, each with a pair of RBI's.

The next matchups are the Lions Club facing Charlie's Auto Body, with the winner facing Rocco's. From there, the winner will face McTire in the finals.

ARE YOU PROTECTED?

by Edward H. Wilkens

PREVENT ACCIDENTAL BLINDNESS

QUESTION: How many people lose their sight due to accidents? Is there any way to lower this cause of blindness?

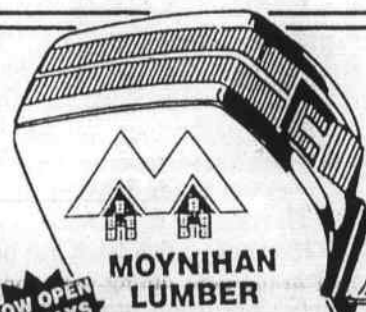

ANSWER: More than 50,000 Americans will lose the sight of at least one eye during the next 12 months, mostly as a result of accidents.

Fortunately, there eye protection available and should be used when you are doing jobs where you can EXPECT some danger to your eyes, such as sanding or painting a ceiling. Hardware stores carry plastic eye protectors to shield against low velocity particles. To prevent eye injury from high speed objects, you should always wear industrial strength, heavy-duty safety glasses.

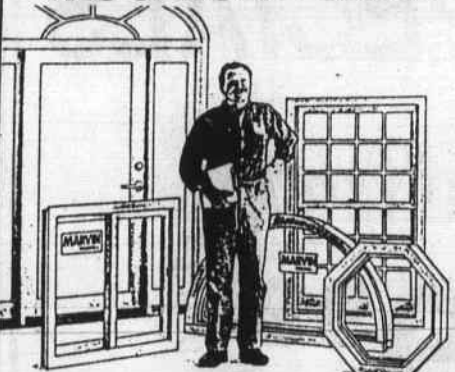

EYE PROTECTORS can save you from becoming blind from home or industrial accidents.

Questions about animal migration

by Bill Conlon

There are great migrations going on right now in the animal world, and scientists still can't quite figure out why or how.

We all know about the annual fall migrations of waterfowl. Geese and ducks by the millions are travelling south right now, to feed and winter over in Central and South America. A truly amazing event.

How do they navigate? Nobody is quite sure. They do, but how?

Waterfowl, however, is only one of many creatures who travel.

There is the annual migration of hawks beginning soon. Like ducks and geese, the hawks also depart the area and head south. Why? Geese and ducks probably travel to keep up with their food supply, which is going to be covered in snow pretty soon in these parts. But hawks are not interested in grains.

Along with waterfowl are woodcock, which are covered by federal migratory bird regulations even though they technically aren't true waterfowl. These weird little birds with the upside down head prefer to eat worms, and they travel to keep up with thawed soil. Frozen dirt is impenetrable to woodcock.

Also travelling are the great blue herons and other wading birds. We have seen a huge increase in herons in this area lately (which I believe is why we see so few frogs anymore).

In the spring the amphibians are migrating toward their favorite local waterhole, for purposes of romance and reproduction. But the reptiles prefer this time of year to travel. Huge snapping turtles may be seen crossing roads as they head to new bodies of water.

Why? Good question. Snapping turtles often fight to the death, and the migration might be individuals on their way to where the losers go. In any event, if you see a snapper in the middle of the road, don't turn it around the way it came. It will only head back after you're gone. The big turtles seem to know exactly where they're going, and they will continue in that direction. Period.

One big mystery is snakes. Snakes gather in the fall and enter underground dens, to spend the winter. Hundreds, even thousands of snakes will share an underground den for the winter months, and they don't seem able to pick a new den if their old one is destroyed.

But how can a snake, which many believe to be near-sighted, find its way across miles of terrain to reach the same hole in the rocks that their great-grandparents used? How do they navigate?

Another amazing traveller is the monarch butterfly. I once spotted a monarch, all alone, while deep sea fishing miles from any shore. The monarchs, with sometimes migrate to Mexico, is supposedly a great prize for butterfly collectors in England, because sometimes a lone monarch will drift off course and end up in the UK.

How can a butterfly possibly find its way to Mexico, or have enough strength to flutter all the way across the Atlantic Ocean? Amazing!

American Eels, which are found in virtually every water body along the Eastern Seaboard, all migrate to one place to breed -- the Sargasso Sea in the mid-Atlantic. Even eels in small "landlocked" ponds find their way to the Sargasso. Curious.

And there is more. Whales and bluefish migrate, and so do caribou and polar bears. Some of the great trips can be explained away, as the creatures follow their food supply. But other trips are still a mystery. How do they do it? And why?

Why ask why? When a "V" of big Canada geese pass overhead, wish them well and enjoy the scene.

This Saturday, September 19, the Shawsheen River in Tewksbury is getting a needed cleanup from the Shawsheen Watershed Environmental Action Team (S.W.E.A.T.) with SCUBA help from the Divers Environmental Survey. And you. All volunteers are asked to show up at the Bridge Street bridge at 8 a.m. and be ready to work until noon. No donations, just your time. Take along a boat, shovels, chainsaws or rope, if you can. Bob Rauseo from S.W.E.A.T. says participants will receive free S.W.E.A.T. T-shirts.

and Thomas Hudson, while keeper Mark Hodder made some great saves in front of the Hurricane net.

The Huskies struck back with goals from Keith Frongillo (two) and Bobby MacIver.

Other good soccer plays were made by Tom Doyle and keepers Matt Gennetti, Matthew Goldblatt and Graham Pazdziorko.

Buckeyes vs Crusaders
The Buckeye goalscorers included Alfredo Bodalto (two) and Thomas Duffy. They were supported by the outstanding hustle of John Tobin, Danny O'Connell, Mark Capozzi and Derek Courtois.

The Crusaders were led by the great plays of Archie Deletter, Christopher Ruggerio and the super goalkeeping of Patrick McDonough.

Wolverines vs Running Rebels

The Wolverines were led by the hard work of Philip O'Brien, Cory Calway, Derek Downs and keeper Michael Schuurman.

The entire Running Rebel team played a super soccer match.

Grades 3 and 4 Division Knicks vs Sixers

The only goal of the match was scored by the Knicks' Richie Buttaro. The Knick offense was led by Joe Luciano, Sean McCarthy and the defense of Chris Flynn and the excellent saves of keeper Ryan Gaudet.

The Sixers responded with a great effort from keeper Ryan Graham and the super soccer plays of Mike Reardon, Daniel McCarthy and Matthew Bayles.

If you fish the Shawsheen, you owe the river something in return.

Concord Rod & Gun Club will be holding an all-day celebration on September 26 (National Hunting and Fishing Day!) from 7 a.m. to 4 p.m. at their Strawberry Hill Road grounds. There will be archery 3D shooting, a novelty turkey shoot, trap shooting, a flea market, a demonstration of hunting dogs, and all sorts of plaid-shirt entertainments. Admission is $3 for adults, and kids under 12 are free. Rain date the 27.

Also on September 27 is Tewksbury Rod & Gun Club's 3rd Annual Sportsman's Rendezvous, featuring shooting events, flea market, bow events, and a surf-and-turf dinner of steamship round, roast pig and steamed fish. It all starts at 10 a.m.

This weekend is the big in-water Norwalk International Boat Show in Norwalk, Connecticut. It's a bit of a drive, but sounds like fun.

Reports are trickling in about a big white "hawk" catching fish out of Silver Lake, Wilmington. From the description I was given (white head, body and tail) it sounds like an Osprey, or fish hawk. It's very possible that an Osprey has taken up residence, but be forewarned -- on a day when you can't catch a single fish, an Osprey certainly will. You may be embarrassed watching it.

LOCAL LEISURE & LIVING

Beer-on-the-vine found on roadsides

by Bill Conlon

A piece of local history lives on in Tewksbury and Wilmington, and a sharp-eyed harvester can still find a piece of that history along the road.

Generations ago, the richest cash crop in Wilmington was hops, the same stuff used in beer making.

Hops is a vital ingredient in beer, with the green flowers boiled to add bitterness to the brew and later more hops are steeped in the hot "wort" to provide aroma. Hops also acts as a preservative for beer and helps in "head" retention.

Nobody can say when the first beer was brewed, but there is evidence the Egyptians were brewing beer over 5,000 years ago.

Hops was sometimes used in beer-making in the last thousand years, but the widespread use of hops only became standard practice about 200 years ago.

Today, hops are absolutely vital to beer making. There are dozens of strains of hops, from the mild Saaz strain of Czechoslovakia to the sharply bitter Pride of Ringwood of Washington state. Strains of hops are chosen for their bittering and aroma qualities, and a wise brewer cautiously chooses the right strain of hops, and the right volume of each strain, for the specific style of beer being brewed. For example, a "stout" needs far more hop bitterness than a lighter "lager" beer.

Eastern Europe provides some of the best hop varieties, although the Pacific Northwest region of the U.S. offers an abundance of hops. Hops only grows between the 40th and 50th parallels, and the climate of New England is just right.

Which brings us to Wilmington. In the post-Revolutionary years, a hops-growing industry sprang up in Wilmington, Mass., where huge bags of hops were kiln-dried, then shipped to the breweries of Albany, New York, by boat and barge. The cash crop brought fame and fortune to many farmers of Wilmington.

But the settlement of the Pacific Northwest drew hops farmers off to that region, and Wilmington's great industry slowly declined. The once-bustling hops farming work in Wilmington was gone by the turn of this century.

Today, nearly all the Wilmington farms have disappeared, and the cultivation of hops is forgotten. But the hardy hops vines were never pulled up, and they continue growing to this day.

Hops grows in climbing vines that may reach 30 feet long. During the peak of the growing season in mid-summer, the vines can grow one to two feet per day, with sprays of the fat green flowers appearing on the creeping vine. Older vines may try to climb nearby trees, and clusters of hops flowers sometimes appear 20 feet or more above the ground.

Hops flowers ripen near the end of August, and most local hops have now passed their peak and dried on the vine. Brown clumps of petals are all that's left on most vines now, but a few vines are still carrying the fresh green flowers.

This scribe has been brewing his own beer for nearly two years now, and fresh hops is always preferred to dried hop pellets or malt extracts with factory-added hops. Varying the amount and strain of hops is one way to "adjust" the flavor of beer.

Last fall, I found a stand of hops growing in a rural part of Dracut, and picked enough of the aromatic flowers to make a dozen batches of homebrew. The Dracut hops have a nasty, unpleasant bitterness, so I use the Dracut hops only for aroma, and not for long-boil bittering.

This year, however, I've watched for hops vines along the roadsides, and the search has been a roaring success. In the past few weeks I've found no fewer than eight hops patches in surrounding towns, all of them wild and untended. Free hops for the picking.

Hops vines look almost identical to grape vines, both of which may share the same patch of roadside. Leaves on a hop vine have deeper lobes than grape leaves, but the brilliant green hops flowers are the easiest part of the plant to spot.

One location in Wilmington (no, I won't say where) produced bags of enormous hops flowers for me, the biggest flowers I've ever seen. The flowers were the size of my thumb, unlike the thimble-size flowers on most other hop vines.

The Wilmington hops have a nice aroma, a sweeter smell than the hop strain from Dracut, but bitterness levels are difficult to determine. Without paying a laboratory to measure the "alpha" and "beta" acid contents of the Wilmington hops, I'll have to rely on trial and error. The proof is in the pudding, or in this case the beer mug.

My first 5-gallon batch of homebrew using Wilmington hops as the bittering agent is now fermenting. In another month or so, I'll report back on the future of Wilmington's former cash crop.

Let's find out what the Colonists saw in Wilmington's hops.

Acadian trails a treat for horses, humans

by Larz F. Neilson

One vacation problem which people have to face is what to do with your pets. One answer is to take them with you. This obviously works better with some pets than others, and with some destinations better than others.

For people with horses, one very fine vacation destination is Acadia National Park on Mount Desert Island in Maine, on land that was once part of the Rockefeller estate. The park has some 80 miles of carriage trails, built between 1913 and 1941 for the late John D. Rockefeller Jr.

The stable at the park has public carriage rides, or horse owners may provide their own. A recent outing there by the Granite State Carriage Association saw about a dozen carriages in the park, with many beautiful horses.

The setting of Acadia is probably one of the few areas on the East Coast where both mountains and the ocean are in the same scenery. Cadillac Mountain is well-known as the first point in the U.S. to receive daylight each day. The island is heavily forested with evergreens, many of which are regrowth, the island having been devastated in a forest fire in 1947. Many areas of the park show exposed ledge, boulder fields and massive mossy granite hanging over the roads. One the downhill side of the roads are boulders lined up like teeth, serving as a guard rail.

The carriage paths are laid out to minimize crossing of the auto roads. There are a few grade crossings, and some on stone bridges. The park has many of these bridges, none of which are identical. The stone-dust carriage paths give the carriages a running surface free of rocks or quagmires.

Much of the driving goes through woods, but several vistas fly by as the carriage moves along at a good trot. A common situation is to be on the side of a mountain looking down at one of the many lakes. The mountains occupy enough of the horizon to prohibit frequent ocean views, but those which appear are spectacular.

A typical day for a carriage drive begins early, with the many chores that come with keeping horses. With the horses tacked and the lunch packed, the trail drive begins in mid or late morning.

The horses on our trip were a pair of chestnut mares, American Saddlebred, mother and daughter. Velvet is 13 years old and Lady is five. In terms of temperament, Velvet is a lady, and Lady is something else. She is fairly good, but does need additional training.

The carts are wooden with 42-inch rubber-faced wheels. They give a good ride, unless the horse has its mind set on "jigging." Lady spent a good part of the morning on Sunday trying to jig instead of walk. But most of the ride was a pleasant trip.

The horses' ears give some indication that they enjoy this type of outing. No barn boredom today — let's go for a brisk trot on a fine road. The carriage has no odometer, but the miles fly by.

A leisurely stop for lunch finds the horses cross-tied among the trees near a water source with a bundle of hay hanging within their reach. Meanwhile, the human animals spread out their crackers, cheese and grapes on a blanket. There are many points along the roads where you can find blueberries, huckleberries or blackberries. While many people recognize the blues, few people pick the huckleberries, leaving a bonus treat for those who know their berries.

The roads are shared with bicyclists and walkers. This is not the trail where you will find serious hikers, but couples out for a leisurely but long walk. Not all of the roads are open to horses. Some bicyclists don't like having to share the trail with horses, although it is the horses that the trails were built for.

At this time of year, a warm day can turn quite chilly by late afternoon. The advisory that came with the invite said "Bring winter clothes." If you didn't, you'll wish you did.

Part of the trails extend onto property still owned by the Rockefeller family. Those trails now have a grassy surface. On one trail is a side trail with a closed gate, leading to the Rockefeller estate.

Recently the Rockefeller family notified the operator of the stable that he was inviting Great Britain's Prince Philip to come to the estate for some trail driving. That visit now seems to have been put off until some time next year.

Wilmington hops

This handful of fresh hops flowers (or "cones") was picked last week in North Wilmington. The location of the hop vines is being kept secret, as the author does not want other homebrewers to raid the cache.

Beat eggs in a large bowl. Stir in oil, sugar, zucchini and vanilla. Sift flour, baking powder, soda, cinnamon and salt. Stir into mixture 'til well blended. Stir in raisins and nuts. Spoon batter into well greased tube pan. Bake 350 degrees for 3/4 to 1 hour. Cool. Remove from pan and cool completely.

This recipe was given to me by the late Flora Kasabuski.

Slim Gourmet Diet Butter

Fifty calories per tablespoon - at half the cost, half the calories and half the cholesterol.

Because your diet butter spreads twice as far, it's only half as salty, so you'll want to add a pinch of salt to make up the difference.

1/2 stick (4 oz.) butter
1/2 cup cold water
pinch of salt

Put the butter in a mixing bowl and allow it to soften to room temperature. Whip with an electric mixer until fluffy. Add the salt and continue to whip on high speed, adding the water gradually. Makes one cup, 50 calories per tablespoon. "Soft, light and magnificently spreadable. It looks and tastes and spreads like butter, it is butter. Put it in the refrigerator and it will harden to the consistency of regular butter.

Fighting for a dream

By DOUGLAS WOOD-BOYLE

Flying is a thrill that John Roach has experienced over and over again for the past 49 years and an experience that has brought the Woburn resident to the heights of a career with the Federal Aviation Agency. Roach's skill with a joy stick has helped him to climb some barriers which have been carefully laid out in his path here on Earth. Being able to fly had always been a dream for Roach. However, it was a dream that he had to work at harder than most people to achieve.

The reason for that hard work was that even in 1943, a good two years after the official government policy on allowing Black Americans to fly had been changed, Roach still had to search throughout Boston to find an Army recruiting office that would allow him to take the test for enlistment into the United States Army Air Corp.

That search took Roach, a native of Boston's South End, from Tremont Street to Huntington Avenue and in and out of nine recruiting offices. Finally at the tenth office, the recruiters knew the policy had been changed and black men were allowed to take the special test for eligibility into the all-black Tuskegee Air Corps.

Other people were always ready to place more barriers in Roach's path to the dream, but in the end he won.

Ironically, Roach flew so high in his career that he had the chance to make some of those smaller people wonder about the wisdom of their earlier practices. Roach was able to rise above their level in every test.

The policy that was changed in 1941 had been put in place in 1939 and was based on a 1930 study supposedly showing that Blacks were incapable or did not have the ability to operate an airplane.

Not only were they not allowed in the Army Air Corps but very few Black Americans even had a pilot's license.

However, Roach and others like him had a goal. "I had always wanted to fly. That was my goal and I was determined to fly," he said in a recent interview.

Roach noted that as a young boy growing into manhood between 1931 and 1938 "I would go to see any movie about flying."

These included such movies as "Dawn Patrol", "Dive Bomber" and "I Wanted Wings." He noted that there were about 21 of the movies in all.

However, even at a young age one fact did not escape Roach's attention and that was that not one black face appeared in any role in any of the movies.

"That told me I had an uphill fight," Roach recalls.

Throughout his high school years Roach had followed the war-time exploits of Great Britain's Royal Air Force and after Pearl Harbor was attacked by the Japanese, he followed the exploits of the Army Air Corps and Naval Air Force pilots who fought the air battles of the Pacific Theater.

Roach also watched another battle taking place right here in this country. In 1940 the National Association for the Advancement of Colored People (NAACP) was able to interest the newspapers and other groups around the country that were sympathetic to the cause, to the lack of black pilots.

The federal government finally bowed to the pressure, but another hurdle was thrown up in the barrier system; that of where to locate a flight training school for blacks.

Sites were explored in Washington D.C., Virginia and North Carolina but it was found that the opposition from the surrounding communities would be dangerous to the flight trainees.

At last the decision was made to locate at the Tuskegee Institute in Alabama. A factor in that decision was the presence of Alfred "Chief" Anderson, one of the few black pilots in the country and the only one to be running a flight training school.

Roach related the story of the time that Chief Anderson unwittingly almost set off a national emergency.

The story revolves around the visit of the then first lady, Eleanor Roosevelt, to the Tuskegee Institute.

President Franklin Delano Roosevelt had sent Eleanor out to review the site. After meeting Anderson, she decided to take a airplane ride with him.

According to the story, the Secret Service guards were up in arms and a call was placed to the White House to attempt to stop the first lady.

President Roosevelt supposedly informed the Secret Service that if his wife had made up her mind to fly with Anderson, there was no way she could be stopped.

After the landing, Mrs. Roosevelt said to Anderson, "It looks like you can fly."

From that proclamation the decision was made to locate the black pilots in Tuskegee and the 99th Squadron of the Army Air Corps was formed.

A total of 991 airmen earned their wings out of what was originally dubbed the Tuskegee Experiment and many of those pilots went on to earn the respect

Roach S-4

THE ROAD TO HISTORY followed by Woburn's John Roach is shown by these pictures depicting Roach and others that formed the Tuskegee Airmen as they fought to be allowed to defend their country.

Anti-Diet Weight Loss
The New Alternative

SUFFERING IS OPTIONAL.
If you have tried dieting in the past and failed, you are not alone. For many, diet is part of the problem, not its solution. Thin people don't want to eat more than they should. So how come you do? When you learn to think about food the way thin people do, then you will eat casually and controllably, just as they do.

Based on successful work with overeaters in therapy.

PREVIEW: To give you a full description of this effective solution to over-eating, we offer a full, two-hour preview at our offices. Admission is $10. Call early to reserve your place, as seating is extremely limited.

this unique, ten-week program was developed to help healthy people to finally control their eating without the need for discipline and the constant struggle against temptation.

WHY WAIT?
This small-class experience is not another diet or food supplement program, but a new opportunity for a permanent change in your relationship with food and your body. You can be happy with both, now.

Austin Prep Golf Tournament

On Monday, September 21, Austin Prep will host its 15th annual "Austin Open" Golf Tournament at the Andover Country Club in Andover.

Proceeds from the tournament which is sponsored by the school's Alumni & Development Office, benefits scholarship and educational programs at Austin.

The day will begin with a noon luncheon at the Andover Country Club followed by a "shot-gun" start at 1:30 p.m. A four-ball scramble will be played.

After the action on the course is complete, dinner will be served in the club's dining room.

READING - The Reading Food Pantry - like many in the area - needs your help.

Since February, the Reading Food Pantry - located at the Old South United Methodist Church - has distributed well over $5,000 worth of food, without questions, to any Reading families who plead "emergency circumstances."

Non-perishable foods such as canned goods, pasta, dry cereals, and many other staples may be dropped off at Old South - check with the church office for current hours.

However, the immediate need is for money - the bank account dropped below $100 this month, according to Rev. David Reid, pastor of the First Baptist Church and president of the Reading Clergy Association. The cash is used to buy and disperse perishables such as milk, meat and fresh vegetables.

Mail your monetary donations to Sister Jean Delaney at St. Athanasius Church, 300 Haverhill St., Reading, MA 01867.

All donations are most welcome.

MALDEN - Edward M. Cardillo, regional coordinator for Employment Resources, Inc. in Malden, reports that 457 youths from Malden, Medford, Everett, and Melrose were employed this summer under the federal government's Summer Youth Employment Training Program.

They did such tasks as working along the roadways, clearing fields and ponds, and beautifying public landscapes; and they worked in day care centers and municipal offices; receiving $5 per hour for the seven or eight hours per week they put in.

Cardillo supervised a staff of 10 counselors - teachers or college students - who all worked together to ensure the teenagers a positive work experience and understanding of the work ethic.

Temple Shir Tikvah formed

The memberships of Temple Shir Tikvah of Winchester and Temple Judea of Stoneham have merged together into Temple Shir Tikvah, a Reform Congregation which will now serve Winchester, Arlington, Medford, Stoneham, and neighboring communities. The expanded Temple Shir Tikvah will conduct High Holiday services as one large congregation for the first time later this month.

Temple Shir Tikvah was founded seven years ago, and has been growing steadily, drawing members from an increasing number of Jewish households in the Winchester area. Temple Judea, formed in 1955, had been experiencing a decline in membership in recent years.

"Shir Tikvah is one of the fastest-growing Jewish Congregations within Route 128," said Shir Tikvah's Rabbi, David Kudan. "Despite our rapid growth, we've been successful in maintaining the feeling and qualities of an extended Jewish family, and we're delighted to welcome the former Temple Judea members into our family. We look forward to celebrating our first High Holidays as one Congregation." The 30 new families from Temple Judea will increase Temple Shir Tikvah's membership to more than 170 families.

"Temple Shir Tikvah was the logical choice for a merger. It is a young, vibrant temple with people willing to work on committees, but they had no building," said Arnold Goldstein, former

PHILOSOPHY OF THE WEEK FROM WOBURN - "Surround yourself with excellent people," says Charlie Hardy of Hillside Florists, "and then, stay out of their way."

SENIOR CENTER - Joan Butler-West, Executive Director of Minuteman Home Care, notes that families should go about choosing a nursing home in a careful, organized way, according to the following guidelines.

Licensing - Ask for the most recent state inspection report and look over any problem areas.

Environment - Is the nursing home clean, orderly and relatively odor-free? Is it conveniently located for family, friends and doctor? Is there an outside space that is secure for people who might wander? Can you take your own furniture and personal belongings? Do the rooms have a curtain or screen for privacy?

Services - Ask for a list of services such as rehabilitation therapy, special diets, etc. Is the kitchen clean? Sample a meal. Does the food look appetizing? Look over an activities schedule. Meet the activities director.

Finances - Ask which services are included in the basic charge and which are not. Take home a copy of the resident's contract.

And most important: Talk to residents and family members about the facility. Word of mouth is the most important reference.

Fighting for a dream

of the white pilots in the bombers that the 99th Pursuit Squad was assigned to protect.

Roach relates the history of the group in a very knowledgeable fashion and tells of the fact that the first black pilots had to have super qualifications such as Doctorates in Philosophy or Science from accredited colleges.

Other Air Corps pilots only had to have a High School degree.

One of the first graduates of Tuskegee was Benjamin O. Davis, who later retired as a Lieutenant General. Davis was the only black to graduate in his Class of 1935 from West Point.

Roach notes that all during his years at the United States Military Academy, Davis' classmates never spoke to him. Upon graduation he became one of the many blacks that had been turned down as part of the Air Corps since its formation in 1917.

After spending several years in the Cavalry, Davis applied to and was accepted in the first class at Tuskegee.

In 1943, the 99th was finally assigned to duty in Europe. With that assignment they were also upgraded from the P-39's and P-40's that they had been flying, and which had seen service in China, to Curtiss P-47's.

However, as with previous planes, the group never had the opportunity to fly any new issues. As Roach notes, the white hierarchy of the Army Air Corps had a theory that white pilots would not fly a plane if they knew that blacks had flown it before them.

According to Roach, the Tuskegee Airmen finally got a break when Colonel Philip Cochran was reassigned from his all-white unit to take over command of the Tuskegee Airmen when they arrived in Europe. Even though Cochran was white, he was sympathetic to the black cause.

Even in Europe during combat, hurdles were placed which the group had to fly over. Roach told of the first pre-flight briefing that the 99th was to attend. They were given the wrong time and showed up at the end of the briefing.

As the pilots left to climb into their planes the members of the 99th asked what the plan was and were told they just had to keep up. They were able to do that and came back safely.

Under pressure from Davis, the group was finally assigned to escort bombers flying over Germany.

Because of the diligence that Davis demanded from his men, the 99th is credited with flying 15,000 sorties without losing any of the white crewed bombers that they were escorting. The 99th lost 66 of the black airmen.

Although Roach had finally passed the test, he had to pass as many hurdles on the ground as the 99th was flying over in the air.

As Roach notes, the experiment was supposedly designed to fail. However, it was succeeding anyway.

Roach noted that the main reason for the success of the experiment, other than the determination of the participants, was the leadership of General Noah F. Parish.

Until Parish, a white man, arrived, Davis had been the ranking officer in the unit. Parish took over the command and instead of distancing himself, he interacted with cadets and decided they could fly.

"If it wasn't for him there is no telling what would have happened to the program," Roach said.

Roach was at Fort Devens after his enlistment and received orders to travel south but not to Tuskegee. Instead he was sent to Arizona, but not without making an enemy of his sergeant at Fort Devens.

And his only sin was to stand up for his rights.

Roach was able to stay his departure until his mother could get in touch with the recruiting office and straighten out the orders to send him to Tuskegee.

Roach remembers coming through South Boston on the train and his mother waving goodbye to him. According to Roach, the train was to take him to basic training in Biloxi, Mississippi.

The ride was comfortable from Boston to Washington D.C. Roach recalls that he had to change trains in Washington and he was able to find a seat about five cars from the engine. All of a sudden the conductor appeared with a police officer and Roach was ordered off the car, which had plenty of seats, and into the dirtiest car on the train, directly behind the engine.

This is just one of the many race related incidents that Roach recalls as he was preparing to go and fight a war for his country.

Roach wryly remembers other incidents as having a bit of irony about them. These incidents included the base commander who had a whole new officers' club built rather than allow the black pilots into the regular officers' club.

The incident took place at Freedman Field in Indiana. Because of the Department of the Defense ruling that the Blacks would be treated as other officers were, the Base Commander said that the new club was for flight trainees.

Having graduated flight school at Tuskegee, the black officers considered themselves above trainees, as did other officers who were only going on to advanced training. They attempted to enter the regular officers' club and several ended up being arrested.

The charges were dropped on all but one member, now a successful Los Angeles businessman. Roach said that today, 47-years after the incident, that man is still trying to have the assault charge dropped that was placed against him when he placed a hand on a white Military Policeman's shoulder.

Another incident Roach almost has to laugh at is the fact that the segregation at Fort Knox in Kentucky took the form of taking 40 seats in the movie house and making them the black section. When the seats were filled no more blacks were allowed into the theater.

The irony was that the seats were in the middle of the movie house and were considered to be among the best. Roach remembers being kicked out when he entered the first time and accidentally took a seat in a location to the side.

In another incident as recent as the 1960's Roach's Reserve Unit was participating in a training exercise in Virginia. When the unit was to report to the hotel where they were to be put up, Roach was told that he could not stay there.

Rather than defend his rights, the Air Force assigned him a special car and provided him with a room at the local YMCA.

During the war, one white pilot trainer crashed and needed a blood transfusion which his wife almost refused because the only matching donor was black.

After the war, the racism stayed with Roach as he and his then girlfriend, and now wife, sent out several hundred letters of application to various airlines in search of a job.

He was finally hired by American Airlines. However, in 1968, Roach left the Air Force Reserve, after serving time as a supply plane pilot in Viet Nam. He had remained in the reserves after the war and was recalled to active service as part of the Cuban crisis.

He took a job with the Federal Aviation Agency after 26-years in the reserves and retired with the rank of Colonel.

As part of his job, Roach had to certify two people that had refused him a job. He said it would have been easy enough to flunk the men from their certification but instead he passed them after they knew who he was.

With a total of 41 years of service to the federal government, Roach retired from the FAA as the Deputy Regional Director of the New England Region. That made him the number two man in all of the six northeast states for the FAA.

During his career, Roach was the first person of color to operate a Flight Standards Field Office for the FAA as the Chief of the Boston Air Carrier District Office.

Now as a member of the Tuskegee Airmen Association, celebrating their Fiftieth Anniversary this year, Roach is one of the several people in that group and the Black Airlines Pilots Association, making sure that young Black people today do not face the discrimination he faced in the 1940's and 1950's and 1960's.

The groups made up of over 600 black pilots work to provide educational support for black youth looking to fly.

As for the flying tradition in the Roach family, his eldest daughter Lorraine is a licensed pilot who owns a Martial Arts Academy and daughter Caroline is a Senior Flight attendant with American Trans World Airlines.

In that position, Caroline has been involved with troop transfers to the Mid-East during Operation Desert Storm and with food airlifts to Nigeria.

Roach is still working and still flying. He owns a consulting business helping people with problems concerning the FAA.

The ordinary approach to management just isn't working.

The current economic situation is just one example of how yesterday's approach to management simply isn't meeting the challenges of today's complex world.

Which is why we believe it's time for a fresh look at management.

At the Lesley College School of Management, our curriculum features an emphasis on leadership skills, ethics, team-building, negotiating, diversity in the workplace and many other areas vital to success in today's changing world.

What's more, since our students are working adults, they put their learning to the test every single work day.

Our accelerated 17-month Master's in Management program will be offered this Fall at two convenient locations:

MOVIES

"Wind"
by Rochelle Flynn

"Wind" Starring Matthew Modine, Jennifer Grey, Cliff Robertson. Directed by Carroll Ballard. Screenplay by Rudy Wurlitzer, Mac Gudgeon. Produced by Mata Yamamoto, Tom Luddy. Rated PG-13.

It would take a strong person to sail past the temptation of making bad jokes about this movie being overblow and full of hot air. But some of us are weaker than others.

"Wind" is probably the most beautiful movie ever made about sailing. The cinematography is breathtaking. Director Carroll Ballard ("The Black Stallion") had his camera crews everywhere. He recorded every angle of the ships, the race, the crew. He captured the urgency and speed and danger of the America's Cup races. No one outside of the sport could ever have imagined the adrenaline rush involved in this team effort.

But Ballard should have made a documentary. The plot, rambling and inane, deserved a burial at sea. It just drags on and on, for 206 minutes, until you feel like you've s-l-o-w-l-y been through the doldrums yourself.

The plot creaks into action when Matthew Modine is selected to crew with a wealthy yachtsman who has won the America's Cup race in the past. Cliff Robertson is the silly millionaire with a tenuous grasp on reality who fully expects to hang onto the Cup. When he selects Modine to be his helmsman, the training begins. It is a time when men will be men and have silly little rituals that mean nothing but cost a lot.

Jennifer Grey plays Modine's girlfriend, who is also an expert sailor as well as an aeronautical engineer. But she is not welcome into the boy's club that makes up the sailing world. When Modine won't forsake his career for her, as she did for him, off she goes. Later, when Modine loses the America's Cup, he turns to her to help him rebuild his ego and try to reclaim the Cup. Of course, she now lives in a Quonset hut on a desert in Utah, but that doesn't seem to be a shipbuilding problem.

Well, it unfurls pretty much as you'd expect. There's no doubt, even from seeing the poster, that Modine and his raffish crew are going to win back the Cup. That's the point. So, the fun has to be in getting there. And aside from the action scenes, this is one incredibly dull story. The whole Utah section is supposed to be eccentric and funny, but never develops past sophomoric and strained. This has a lot to do with supporting players who are never fleshed out.

Though Modine and Grey are convincing as sailors, and the action is great, the rest of the film is too watery to stay afloat.

Dynasty International celebrates 6th anniversary and new location

The Dynasty International Agency for Modeling and Talent has recently celebrated its sixth anniversary and is growing stronger each year. During the past year, Dynasty models have appeared on many local, national and international print ads such as Reebok, T.J. Maxx, Vogue, People, Child, Kids Fashion, Mass Lottery and many more including numerous department stores. Dynasty models have also appeared on more than 40 box covers for such famous names as Milton Bradley, Hasbro, Parker Brothers, Ideal Toy, Harmony Toy, Trivial Pursuit and Disney. In only six years Dynasty talent have taken part on more than 600 TV commercials on local, national and international levels.

Dynasty represents babies, children, teens and adults. Dynasty Models and Talent are made up of people from all over New England who have the looks and the talent to be part of today's very competitive modeling and TV commercial industry.

Along with the modeling and TV commercials, Dynasty has been busy in the Motion Picture, TV Show, Rock Video, Industrial and Live Fashion Markets.

In the teen and adult divisions, Directors Joe and Ginger Freeman are proud to say that many of Dynasty's people have been busy working in major motion pictures such as "Wind" directed by Francis Ford Coppola. Other current movies include "Housesitter" with Goldie Hawn and Steve Martin, and School Ties. Dynasty talent have recently auditioned for upcoming movies such as Life with Mikey starring Michael J. Fox, Man Without a Face starring Mel Gibson and Killer Sam directed by Rob Reiner.

For those MTV fans, Marky Mark chose not one but two Dynasty female teens for one of his latest videos, Take a Walk on the Wild Side! The Boston Market is beginning to see a larger share of the Music Videos being recorded here.

Dynasty has truly become one of the top full service agencies for both modeling and TV commercials in New England. Success has been attributed to a lot of hard work by both the staff and the great wealth of talent and abilities which the Dynasty family of models and talent have brought to this industry. Sometimes results will come quickly and for others it may take some time. Ability, confidence and determination are the main attributes to success.

To celebrate their move into new spacious offices and studio at 279 Cambridge Street in Burlington, Dynasty has announced the opening of business relationships with many international clients and agencies. The major expansion is being spearheaded by Ginger Freeman who modeled in Taipei for many years. Ginger is currently working agencies and clients in Japan, Hong Kong, Taiwan, Singapore, Italy, France, Germany and South America. Some jobs have been finalized and she is currently in the process of booking more upcoming print and video assignments with overseas clients. She hopes to finalize numerous major assignments in the next few months. Clients from other countries really love coming to New England and especially the Boston area to do their print and video work. Ginger is also working on the possibility of some Dynasty models travelling to the Orient for possible modeling assignments.

The future really sounds exciting for the models and talent at Dynasty. It is nice to know that New England people do not have to travel to New York or Hollywood to get a start in this fascinating business. There are opportunities out there. If interested in modeling, TV, commercials, or motion pictures, call Dynasty at (617) 273-2623 for an appointment.

You will never know if you have what it takes, unless you try.

Singing waitresses at Kelley's

Singing waitresses are back on the North Shore again! Kelley's Seafood and Steak House located on Route 28 in North Reading is now offering a gala of fun and entertainment on Sunday evenings that the whole family can enjoy. In the best tradition of dinner theatre, Flashback, Kelley's own singing waitresses, brings the glamour of showbiz right to the table.

Flashback is comprised of Kelly Cassidy of Reading, Tawnya Kitts of the Salem and Lynn area and Nancy B. Rock from Colorado. The three girls have been pursuing careers in theatre, television and the music industry. Tawnya currently may be seen on tv as spokeswoman for L.I.B.S. Beauty School's advertisement. Nanci fronts the popular alternative-pop band Agent 99 and her songs, "Call of the Wild" and Sex Detectives," have been played on WBCN. Kelly, a recent graduate of Reading High School, attended one of the most competitive acting schools in New York City, The Academy of Musical and Dramatic Arts, which boasts such graduates as Tyne Daly. The three girls won their roles as Kelley's singing waitresses and having been preparing a nostalgic 50s show under the direction of Barbara Morash of Stoneham.

The girls have been working hard, learning the ropes of waitressing while coordinating dance steps, vocal lines and harmony. Kitts exclaimed, "I'm building some serious stamina running back and forth through the restaurant, attending to tables, keeping up with the band's energetic pace of songs like "Do You Wanna Dance" and "Why Do Fools Fall In Love" etc., while keeping my cartwheels within the area of the stage!"

B. Rock agreed. "Performing in a rock band takes a lot of energy, but singing 'Johnny Angel' after dancing through the restaurant, including cartwheels, has really been a challenge!" Cassidy enthused, "I love it. Singing and performing! Putting everything together. I'm having a ball!" All three girls nodded in approval.

There are two dinner theatre seatings. The first is from 4:30 to 5:15 p.m. with the show scheduled about 6 p.m. All is completed by 7 p.m. so that the restaurant may be cleared for the next seating. The second seating is between 7:30 to 8 p.m. with the show beginning about 9 p.m. The 50s show runs about 40 minutes in length and Kelley's provides nonsinging waitresses to team with the singers so that service can be continuous.

Any questions? - call Kelley's at 508-664-2103.
